U.S. PLAN TO END FREEDOM OF SEA PLEASES BRITISH

London Sees Move as Step to League.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Washington dispatches stating that Secretary of State Cordell Hull will soon recommend a plan to President Roosevelt involving the abandonment of America's claim to the freedom of the seas have caused a sensation here.

The newspapers comment, but cautiously, on the move. None seems to know how far America is prepared to go toward abandoning her claim for the right as a neutral to trade with belligerents.

Assurance has been expressed here that the matter has not been officially discussed by Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's ambassador at large; Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations of the United States navy, or other American delegates to the naval conference. But there is every indication to believe that it has been mentioned in private conversations and that the gist of these have been sent to Washington.

British Are Pleased.

The British are frankly pleased at the prospect of the removal of the danger of American intervention in any future war against the right to search vessels in the event of a blockade. They see in it another move toward closer Anglo-American coöperation in world affairs.

In some quarters it is even taken as an approach by the United States to the league of nations, which, even if not to the extent of membership, would mean the closest acceptance by the American government of the league decisions as to aggressors and victims in case of a threatened conflict.

If this is so it would mean that the United States is willing to accept the ruling of Geneva on who is right and who is wrong in any future struggle, and for all practical purposes to take her orders from the league in the event of a new world war.

U. S. Delegates Pack Up.

Meanwhile the American naval delegates are packing up. This does not mean that they will sail before Dec. 29. They cannot sail on any but an American boat, and there is none until the Washington departs on that date.

Although their work is done and the conversations will be definitly adjourned within a day or two, they must wait at Claridge's, the most expensive hotel in London, so that an American line may have the benefit of their passage money.

Davis and Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon are conferring on terms of the communique to be issued to the press when the conference adjourns. It is likely no definite date will be set for resumption of the conversations.

Japan Urges Parley Resumed.

The Japanese are urgent in their requests that they be resumed as soon as possible after Christmas, but both the Americans and the British see no use of proceeding unless the Japanese climb down from their demand for global parity.

Whether Japan's denunciation of the Washington naval treaty arrives this week or not, adjournment has been decided on. It is hinted the Japanese may speed up the notice of the denunciation and make new proposals in hope of keeping the conversations alive.

France to Boost Naval Rates.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—(AP)—France, watching with keen interest the futile naval conversations in London, laid plans today to boost its naval ratio far above the present 1.75 in capital ships at any conversations which may follow Japan's denunciation of the Washington treaty.

This year's report of the naval budget described bluntly as "absurd" the present 1.75 ratio to 5 for Britain and America and 3 for Japan, and equality with Italy in capital ships. It was indicated in informed quarters that the position will be challenged as completely inadequate at the first opportunity.

France wants to throw overboard the whole question of naval parity, which has embittered her relations with Italy. Deputy Jacques Stern, in his report on the naval budget recently, recalled promises made by Aristide Briand before the chamber of deputies in 1923 that France would not be bound by any automatic renewal of the Washington and London treaties.

WEEPING MOTHER TAKES HER SON'S LOOT TO POLICE

A small, gray haired woman, about 67 years old, entered the Englewood police station last night. Her eyes were red from weeping, and her voice shook as she placed a box on the desk before Sergt. Edward Davis.

"I am Mrs. Della Craver," she said in a low voice, and looked directly at the policeman. "I live at 205 East 70th street. Tonight my son brought this box home. It contains a lot of jewelry. He said a man gave it to him on the street today.

"But I fear my son may have come by it dishonestly. He has been unemployed for two years. My people have always been upright and honest. If my son has done wrong he should be punished."

Sergt. Davis found that the jewelry, a quantity of rings and watches, was taken early yesterday morning in a burglary of the B. J. Hagamann Jewelry company, 6904 Wentworth avenue.

A squad was sent to the Craver home, but the son, James, 31 years old, had vanished.

Hitler's Police Jail 600 in Moral Purge

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Six hundred Germans, it was revealed tonight, have been taken into custody by secret police in raids upon public baths and Berlin bars in a new "purge" of immoral elements, chiefly directed at the Storm Troops.

The raids began some ten days ago, men of all ages being taken into custody for questioning not only about their sexual habits but concerning their political affiliations.

At least four baths and bars, two of them in fashionable sections of the capital, have been raided. The police activity sharply recalled the situation which furnished Adolf Hitler with one reason for his "blood cleansing" of the Storm Troops last June.

Centers of Abnormality.

Many of the raided baths were described by police as centers of abnormality, even those located in exclusive Berlin neighborhoods. Interest of the police in whether foreigners were present in these raided baths led to the belief that the cleanup was perhaps motivated by suspicions that these places were also used by plotters for rendezvous.

Even before the execution last June of Capt. Ernst Roehm, former Nazi Storm Troop head, it had been revealed, although quietly, that doubtful moral practices had reached such proportions that a national scandal was threatened.

Many non-German circles have since openly spoken of the Storm Troops as attracting perverts.

Popular Bar Raided.

One of the bars recently raided was in the Fasanenstrasse neighborhood, known to many Americans.

"We are conducting an intense fight against vice," one police official said today. "The evil must be stamped out wherever it occurs."

The ministry of propaganda admitted that three large resorts had been closed after being raided by police. It was learned, from an official source that 100 men had been arrested in Berlin and 500 outside the capital, mostly in the suburbs.

It is reported the police forced the guests of one notorious cabaret which they raided to do physical exercises far into the night.

Sounding of Automobile Horns Forbidden in Rome

ROME, Dec. 17.—(AP)—One of the noisiest cities in the world became almost silent today as the law forbidding sounding of automobile horns in Rome went into effect.

FRANCE PAYS $75,000 FOR 318 LOVE LETTERS OF NAPOLEON TO MARIE

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The grandiloquent expressions of an imperial lover—the letters of Napoleon to the Empress Marie-Louise—were sold at auction today for $75,000. The letters, 318 in all and dealing with every phase of Napoleon's courtship, were bought in one block by the French government. They covered the whole heroic scene, the courtship, marriage, the campaigns, and the Elba exile periods.

Napoleon's letters reveal him—in so far as Marie-Louise is concerned—as the correct and affectionate lover, rather than the passionate, irresistible suitor. The sale also proved the accuracy of the auctioneer's opinions. At the time of the sale of the letters of the emperor to Josephine, his first wife, they said one of the letters to Josephine was worth 18 times as much as one of the letters to Marie-Louise. As a matter of cold fact, eight of the Josephine letters brought $22,000 a year ago.

Few of the letters which changed hands today have been published. The letters were made available by the action of a nobleman, who remained anonymous, and who inherited them. The bids rose rapidly after an initial offer of £2,500. In another salesroom, bidding on the pear shaped pearls of the Empress Josephine reached $7,500. This was not within the reserve limit and the jewels were withdrawn.

BUILDINGS URGED TO ADMIT DOGS THAT LEAD BLIND

Mayor Kelly yesterday urged managers of hotels, restaurants, other buildings and public conveyances to lift the ban on dogs in case they are trained to lead the blind. He said it had come to his attention that blind persons accompanied by such dogs had been refused admittance to some public buildings.

"Most of the unwillingness on the part of building owners or managers," the mayor said, "is probably due to unfamiliarity with the fine work these blind leader dogs are doing. These animals are thoroughly trained and there is no reason to fear a nuisance of any sort."

HAIL AVIATION'S GREAT STRIDES ON ANNIVERSARY

Flyers Foresee Era of More Miracles.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

In town and hamlet, city and village, a nation gathered yesterday to memorialize the daring venture of two brothers who made the first flight in a heavier than air craft just 31 years ago.

As speakers throughout the country extolled achievements of the aviation industry during the past three decades, two veteran flyers, senior pilots for the United Air Lines, appearing at Chicago's commemorative ceremonies in connection with National Aviation day, predicted that aviation's future holds accomplishments more dazzling than any heretofore.

Honor Orville Wright.

It was on Dec. 17, 1903, from an isolated farm at Kitty Hawk, N. C., that the brothers Wright made their epochal flight in a flimsy biplane. In his home at Dayton, O., Orville Wright, surviving brother since the death of Wilbur, received yesterday the homage of the nation's leaders.

Other ceremonies were taking place at the same time in 1,400 airports and at hundreds of other places. Even in transport planes above the clouds on their regular trips, the passengers and crews took notice of the occasion at 10:30 a. m.—the official hour for observance.

See Transoceanic Service.

The two pilot-commentators who see years of unbounded progress before their industry are E. Hamilton Lee, stocky, dapper, smiling, and Jack Knight, bronzed, slight, with deep-set brown eyes that twinkle beneath a broad brow.

"There'll be a regular passenger service by flying boat over the Atlantic and Pacific oceans in two years," predicted Pilot Lee. "Within the same period will occur flights up at 25,000 feet, in the 'clear' and above cloud formations that are dangerous because they provide moisture which may become ice on wings.

Travel in Stratosphere.

"At 25,000 feet the first steps in real stratosphere flying will be worked out. Speeds will increase, fuel economy will come and then gradually the regular transport flying will climb, with sealed cabins, into the really thin air at 40,000 feet. At that height we'll get real speed.

"Those things are so close to us that we can look ahead and see them just a matter of days away. But what will come next we can only guess. We know that possibilities are unlimited. I've been flying for 21 years. I've graduated from a 16 horse power Wright pusher into a Boeing 247-D pulled through space by 1,100 horses.

"I've seen so much happen in my own life that I don't want to stick my neck out by delimiting the future."

Two Big Difficulties Remain.

The two pilots agreed that the problem of preventing formation of ice on airplane wings while flying through fog or cloud in freezing temperatures was one of the two major unsolved difficulties. The other problem is a way to landing fast, heavy transport airplanes safely in dense fog.

As for ocean flying, they said, "With the airplanes, the navigators, and the pilots that are flying in the West Indies today, it ought to be a cinch."

Both men asserted that they believed Pan-American Airways, which is to begin experimental flights between the United States and Asia via Hawaii in February, would "find it easy sailing from the start."

Lee began flying in Minneapolis in 1913. He was a civilian instructor in the air corps during the world war and became one of the country's first airmail pilots when the army air mail corps instituted postal flying in 1919.

Each Flies 1¼ Million Miles.

Knight began flying with the air corps in 1918. He joined the air mail corps shortly after the war and has flown every division of the coast-to-coast "mid-continent" route ever since. He was one of the volunteers to fly the air mail by night on Washington's birthday, 1921, when he piloted a ship from North Platte, Neb., to Chicago.

Convict Gives Even M. Dumas an Idea or So

The best laid schemes o' mice and men
Gang aft a-gley
And leave us naught but grief and pain

—Robert Burns.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Day after day, week after week, and year after year, Stephen Kaleman was serving out a life sentence for murder in the Jackson penitentiary.

He was a skilled workman and was assigned to the arts and crafts department of the grim prison. Outside was the free air; inside was drab monotony.

To win that freedom Kaleman needed tools. Surreptitiously he began to take metals from the workshop; a bit of steel here, a bit of iron there. From them he fashioned crude but efficient drills and files, saws, and a hammer.

Needs a Gun—Makes Him One.

A weapon was needed. Kaleman slipped out of the arts and crafts department a short piece of tubular steel. Night after night he worked on it until it was rifled. Another piece he made into a firing chamber. With a knife he fashioned a wooden stock and assembled the gun by attaching the barrel to the stock with stolen set screws.

Copper tubing formed the shells. Bullets he moulded from lead. Matchheads and cellulose, soaked from the back of playing cards and some other highly combustible material became his powder. A solder cap impregnated with fulminate became a detonator.

After months, Kaleman was ready with his first plans. He took one man into his confidence. It was John Schultz, also serving life for murder. Together, they gained entrance to the basement through steel trap doors in the floor, used for drainage. Through a labyrinth of pipes, conduits, and electric cables they made their way to a concrete air shaft which led to the roof. They chiseled their way into the shaft through two sets of steel sheeting and the concrete.

Fits Ladder of Steel.

Up the shaft at 2 foot intervals there were bolts holding the reinforcement for the concrete. Kaleman carefully fitted their threads to pieces of iron tubing he had stolen. Carefully he worked upward, screwing in the tubes as ladder "rungs" as he progressed at night and removing them each day to avoid discovery.

Forty "rungs" finally were ready. Schultz meanwhile was slipping twine out of the shop and weaving it into a rope.

Saturday night all was ready. They wired the basement door shut, entered the airshaft, and climbed upward, slowly but steadily, Kaleman setting the bars on the way.

Schultz's rope was thrown over the edge of the roof and they slid down, outside the prison walls to freedom!

Trailed Through Snow.

But an alarm had been sounded. Kaleman was recaptured by two guards who had trailed him eight miles through the snow. Schultz on Sunday evening was seized in the home of a farmer whose wife had suspected him when he applied for food. She had telephoned the prison while he ate.

Tonight they tried out Kaleman's pistol. Fearing the thing would explode, the son of the warden fixed it tightly in a vise, aimed at a target in the prison pistol range. A long string was attached to the trigger.

The first shot was a bull's-eye!

CRIME ALLIANCE WITH DILLINGER SURVIVORS TOLD

Through questioning of Joseph Burns, ex-convict who was seized early Sunday in a flat at 700 West 69th street, the police and federal authorities yesterday became convinced that the notorious Dillinger and Touhy gangs, which established a reign of terror in the middle west for more than a year, had interlocking directorates and coöperated frequently in their crimes.

Further, it was said, the investigating authorities believe that Tommy Touhy, who with his brother Roger headed the Touhy gang in raids from strongholds in northwestern Cook county, is now the leader of the remnants of both gangs and may soon gain recognition as America's Public Enemy No. 1. Roger Touhy and three of his henchmen are in Joliet penitentiary, serving 99 year sentences for the kidnaping of John [Jake the Barber] Factor.

Burns an Ally of Dillinger.

Burns was one of ten men who fled from the Indiana prison at Michigan City on Sept. 26, 1933, with the aid of John Dillinger. Afterward he was a companion of Dillinger. He asserted under long questioning by postal inspectors and Capt. John Stege of the Chicago police that he had not been in contact with Dillinger after that notorious criminal's escape from the Crown Point jail last March. This claim was taken with at least a couple of grains of salt, however.

Also, Burns confessed that he had been friendly with Tommy Touhy. The latter was a prisoner with Burns at Michigan City for several years, having been sent there in 1924 for burglary and paroled in the summer of 1930. Burns was sentenced to life in prison for murder.

Tells Meetings With Touhy.

Quite readily he admitted that Touhy, whom he called "Irish," was his good friend, and that they had been in conference recently. This was, regarded as significant in view of the fact that Touhy, who is said to be suffering from tuberculosis, has been able to evade the pursuit that the police and federal authorities have been pressing against him for at least sixteen months.

The possibility that Burns and Touhy, the latter a short, blue eyed chestnut haired desperado of 118 pounds, but alert with a machine gun, may have collaborated in several recent robberies that yielded large loot interested the investigators. The most noted of these suspected crimes was the taking of $427,000 from an armored truck in Brooklyn, N. Y., last Aug. 21.

Prisoner Denies the Holdup.

Burns asserted he knew nothing of the crime. But he was out of Chicago at the time the robbery occurred and no satisfactory account of his movements has been given. Touhy, at liberty, could have been there as well as any other place, and the imagination and daring displayed by the holdup men were of the type Touhy is known to have.

His finger prints and his picture were sent yesterday, with those of Burns, to the authorities in Brooklyn. There was a rumor during the evening that Burns was to be sent there by airplane, but this was denied by Capt. Stege and the postal inspectors.

An effort was made to connect Burns with a recent $50,000 robbery of the summer cottage of Thomas J. Maloy, Chicago's motion picture union czar, at Long Beach, Ind. No definite connection was established, but witnesses did identify the ex-convict as one of the robbers who took $10,000 from Jacob Kinstler, a jewelry salesman, in the Hotel La Salle Friday night.

Maintains Gangster's Silence.

Burns throughout followed the traditions of the gangs, admitting facts that would not harm him and declining to comment about crimes, either his own or Touhy's.

At one time he requested that special consideration be given Mrs. Jean Borland, who was with him in the flat when Capt. Stege and Deputy Attorney General Edward Barce of Indiana arrested him. He indicated that he might be willing to talk to more purpose if he were given assurance she would not be prosecuted.

Capt. Stege ordered that ballistics tests be made of the two machine guns, three rifles and two automatic pistols found in the Burns flat. The captain said that he believed Burns had been involved in several killings and that the tests might prove his implication. The serial numbers on the bills making up the $625 he had with him also are to be traced.

Postal Men Follow Clews.

According to Chief Postal Inspector Walter Johnson, the clews tying Tommy Touhy and Burns to the Brooklyn holdup were good enough to be taken seriously, although Brooklyn police have a theory that the two gangsters were not involved. The postoffice is interested in the crime because some of the funds taken belonged to the postal service.

It has long been suspected that the Touhy territorial seat in the northwest suburbs was a place of refuge for most of the noted gangsters who came into the Chicago district. The Touhys in the days of Al Capone's great power gathered about them so desperate a band of ex-convicts that even the redoubtable Capone refused to war with them.

Later it was believed that George [Machine Gun] Kelly, a typical bad man of the southwest, received succor from the same source. Baby Face Nelson, returning from California, stopped in the same territory.

Find Major Gangs Linked.

In their war on crime the federal agents have found abundant evidence that the interests of gangs all over the country converged and that working agreements were fairly well worked out among them.

The Dillinger and Touhy mobs had headquarters both in Chicago and in St. Paul. Western desperadoes like Verne Miller, the ex-South Dakota sheriff, came to Chicago to hide or to rob. Others from the southwest, such as Kelly, Pretty Boy Floyd and Harvey Bailey, also visited here when the exigencies of their crimes pushed them. The Dillinger and the Touhy gangs aided them.

The government's war has taken its toll. Dillinger is dead. So is Pretty Boy. So is Nelson. Verne Miller was shot down in Detroit. Kelly and Bailey are locked behind bars. Of the ten who fled from Michigan City prison all are accounted for—dead or imprisoned—except Joseph Fox and John Hamilton, and Fox is a minor figure.

There have been reports that Hamilton is dead. If he is, Tommy Touhy is the most important gangster left at liberty.

Report Hamilton in Kansas.

Lawrence, Kas., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Four men in a motor car [Oldsmobile] answering the description of the one in which officers believed John Hamilton and Alvin Karpis, gangsters, were dodging about eastern Kansas held up a filling station seven miles south of here tonight.

The men took $5 from Guy Carpenter, operator of the station. Carpenter said he fired four shots at the men as they drove away, going north on high way U. S. 73-W.

ROBS CASHIER OF CAFE TWICE IN SAME NIGHT

The police are searching for a young man who demonstrated last night that he was thinking about making a career of robbing the Triangle restaurant at 57 West Randolph street.

Well dressed and suave the robber went into the restaurant at about 9 p. m. He sat down and looked the place over. Then without being served he went over to the cashier, Miss Virginia Peck, and gave her back his check. Miss Peck said it was all right if he hadn't eaten.

"I wouldn't want the company to lose anything on me," the man said.

Shortly before 11 p. m. he returned. This time he went up to Miss Peck, displayed a pistol and made her hand him the $100 in the cash register. Then he went away. The police were notified of the stickup and said they'd look for him.

But they didn't look in the right places. At midnight while Miss Peck and Miss Dorothy Russell, who relieved her at the desk, were checking the receipts the man entered again with his pistol and compelled the two girls to hand over $85 more, with which he fled.

RESIDENT OF CITY FOR 71 YEARS WILL BE 99 TOMORROW

How does it seem to be almost 99?

To Abraham Greenburg, resident of Chicago for 71 years who will celebrate his 99th birthday tomorrow, it's a "pretty good" time of life.

"Yes, pretty good," exulted Mr. Greenburg, his brown eyes sparkling as he sat in the apartment at 4739 Ingleside avenue where he lives with his daughter, Mrs. Mildred Isaacs. "I'm just planning now on making it 100."

Born in Amsterdam and taken to London at the age of 16, Mr. Greenburg crossed the Atlantic in a sailing vessel in 1863 and came to Chicago with his wife, Hannah, who died three years ago. Here he opened a little pawnshop on South Halsted street, and not until 25 years ago, when he was 74, did he retire.

'Intent to Rob' Conviction Upheld by Supreme Court

The conviction of Lawrence Roche, alias James Stuart, for attempted robbery, was sustained by the Illinois Supreme court yesterday. Roche and Frank Bree were captured Oct. 21, 1933, during their attempted robbery of the Allyn & Bacon Publishing company office at 2231 South Park way. Roche appealed on the ground that Miss Caroline Porod, the cashier, did not have the company's pay roll when he threatened her with a pistol. The high court ruled that his belief that she had the pay roll was sufficient.

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The state will ask the death penalty for Philip Kennamer, 19, son of a federal judge here, on the charge of murdering John F. Gorrell Jr.

This was indicated by County Attorney Holly Anderson today following the preliminary hearing before Judge Bradford Williams in the Common Pleas court after which Kennamer, who has confessed to slaying Gorrell Thanksgiving night, was bound over to the County District court for trial late in January.

Finding of guilty on a charge of first degree murder is punishable in Oklahoma by life imprisonment or death in the electric chair with the state qualifying a jury for the death penalty where it intends to prove premeditated murder. The tenor of the brief evidence presented by the prosecution today was that Kennamer declared nine days before the slaying that he would kill Gorrell.

Believes Born a Suicide.

After the preliminary hearing J. Berry King, attorney general of Oklahoma, conferred with the prosecuting attorneys, said that he was convinced that Sidney Born Jr., who drove Kennamer to his fatal meeting with Gorrell and was found fatally wounded Dec. 9, committe suicide and was not murdered.

While King would not reveal the information on which he based his opinion, he hinted that Born killed himself because he feared Kennamer might reveal the details of a wild party the two staged at a Tulsa hotel the night before Gorrell was killed. King, who goes out of office as attorney general on Jan. 14, will act as special prosecutor at the Kennamer trial.

While the state was proving its prima facie case today part of the defense plans become evident. In cross-examining Floyd C. Huff, Kansas City airport operator, Attorney A. Flint Moss, chief of defense counsel, brought out that Kennamer in making threats against Gorrell was planning to frustrate an extortion plot which the judge's son has said Gorrell was planning against Homer Wilcox, Tulsa oil magnate, on the threat of kidnaping Wilcox's daughter, Virginia.

Drinking Is Admitted.

Huff admitted that he and Kennamer had been drinking when the threats were made. Kennamer, according to the defense contention, entered the extortion plot to block it because of his "juvenile adoration" for the Wilcox girl.

"While we were driving from Louisburg to Pittsburg, Kas.," Huff testified, "Kennamer asked me if I knew why he came to Kansas City. He then told me he had come to kill Gorrell. He pulled a dagger from his grip and also showed me a pair of rubber gloves, which he said he had bought to avoid finger prints."

Auto Collision Traps a Pair of Thieves; 3 Others Hurt

Two young filling station burglars were captured by Park Ridge police early yesterday after a chase which ended when their automobile crashed into another car at Talcott avenue and Higgins road, injuring three persons. The impact jammed the doors of the thieves' car, trapping them inside until the police arrived. The two are Tony Catatano, 1951 Superior street, and William Placzack, 1939 Chicago avenue. Those injured in the other car are Miss Evelyn Trobell, 20 years old, 5712 Waveland avenue; Miss Phyllis Kochen, 19, of 535 Cornelia avenue, and Alfred Truppa, 24, of 4505 North Mansfield avenue.

FIVE HELD AFTER SPENDING ORGY ON STOLEN CASH

'Kidnap Plot' Defense of Victims' Son.

Goshen, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Five men and youths are under arrest here in an amazing extortion plot. The five were seized after an orgy of spending on a trip from Nappanee to Jacksonville, Fla., and return in less than a week.

The money was the life savings of Mr. and Mrs. John Godshalk, who live near Nappanee. It was taken from secret hiding places. Although the elderly couple is unable to determine the exact amount of the loss, officers have accounted for more than $1,500. It may exceed $3,000.

Son Admits Taking Cash.

Those under arrest are:

Charles Anthony Godshalk, 25, son of the couple, who says he took the money under threats of kidnaping.

Harold Frenger, 20, Olive township, and Fred Frutizer, 37, Nappanee, alleged instigator of the kidnaping scheme.

Dean Wagner, 20, Nappanee, who exchanged the old-style bills for new currency.

Edward Ryan, 20, of South Carolina, picked up on the trip to Florida and believed by authorities to be innocent.

The five were arrested on their return from the wild ride to Florida. Frenger, Wagner and Ryan were apprehended in a South Bend night club. Godshalk and Frutizer were arrested at Nappanee.

Two Sign Confessions.

Frenger and Wagner both signed confessions before Robert G. Beck, deputy prosecutor, and William Bandelier, deputy sherif. Frenger's confession accounts for $1,460 of the money.

The spending included purchase of a used automobile, a new sedan, two revolvers, gaudy jewelry, bright red shirts, new clothing, and whirlwind visits to night clubs in Elkhart and St. Joseph counties. The youths had $155 when arrested.

Although all the money was in old size bills, no one in the Nappanee community reported the lavish expenditures of Frenger and Frutizer. Officers first stumbled on to a clew through an anonymous letter.

Jail Chef Trapped as He Delivers Drugs to Inmate

William Bolin, colored, 5727 South Michigan avenue, a chef employed at the County jail for six months, was trapped yesterday in the act of delivering drugs to an inmate. Sherif John Toman said Bolin was seized as he delivered 10 capsules of heroin to Harold A. Jackson, colored, and was found to have two more capsules and several marijuana cigarets in his clothing.

ILLINOIS JOINS HUNT FOR 'WOMAN' BELIEVED MRS. STOLL KIDNAPER

Moline, Ill., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Search for a man disguised in women's clothing who is suspected of being Thomas Robinson Jr., the mentally deficient kidnaper of the wealthy Mrs. Berry Stoll in Louisville, Ky., was spurred throughout Illinois and Iowa tonight.

Authorities took up the trail after they learned a person dressed in women's clothes, but suspected of being a man, had rented a car from the Tri-City Drivurself system garage here Saturday following an unsuccessful attempt to obtain a car from the chain's Davenport office. The car was not returned.

Two employés in the Davenport garage identified police photographs of Robinson as the person who tried to rent a car there. Fred H. Wiley, the manager, said a half hour after he received a telephone call from a masculine voice with a southern accent inquiring about rates for rented cars he was surprised to have a caller in woman's clothes arrive for the car.

JUDGE HOLDS UP PRISON SENTENCE OF ALBERT ANNAN

Albert Annan, 49 years old, was sentenced to one to fourteen years in prison for manslaughter by Judge Walter P. Steffen in the Criminal court. Later Judge Steffen, reviewing the sentence, ordered it rescinded and set the case over to Wednesday morning, when, he said, he would rule on a motion for a new trial.

The judge based his change of judgment on the alleged failure of the state to establish certain salient facts concerning the death of Mrs. Ottila Griffin, 45 years old. She was slain Oct. 16 during a quarrel with Annan while the radio blared in an apartment the couple shared at 1048 West 79th street. In 1924, Annan's former wife, Beulah, was acquitted of slaying her sweetheart, Harry Kalstedt, to the music of a phonograph.

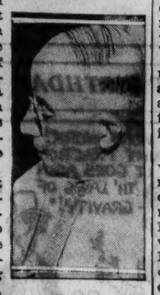
TWO ATTORNEYS HELD AS AIDS IN KIDNAPING PLOT

Took Share in Urschel Ransom, Charge.

Oklahoma, City, Okla., Dev. 17.—[Special.]—Two attorneys were under indictment and in jail tonight charged with complicity in the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil millionaire, in 1933. The lawyers represented defendants in the kidnap trial.



BEN LASKA.

The department of justice announced the arrest of the two men. They are James C. Mathers, young Oklahoma lawyer, and Ben Laska, gray haired veteran of the bar at Denver. Mathers is held in jail here and Laska in the Colorado city.

"The action taken against these lawyers," said Dwight Brantley, chief of the bureau of investigation here, "reflects the determination of the division of investigation that individuals appropriately known as criminal attorneys who sponsor, guide, advise, and protect the members of the underworld in their criminal operations shall receive appropriate punishment.

Charged with Handling Ransom.

"The division has suspected for a considerable period that Laska's relations to the various members of the underworld with whom he has been associated have been more intimate and extended than those based upon the legitimate duties and responsibilities of an attorney to his client."

The men are charged specifically with handling part of the $200,000 ransom loot that went to Albert Bates, one of the actual kidnapers, who is now serving a life term at Alcatraz Island prison. Harvey Bailey, southwest desperado; George (Machine Gun) Kelly, and a dozen others were also convicted and sentenced in the abduction.

At the trial Mathers was co-counsel with his father for Harvey Bailey and Laska represented Bates. Laska also represented a group of suspects in the $60,000 kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II. in Denver.

Received Part of Ransom.

The indictment, charging conspiracy, alleged that Laska received $10,000 of the Urschel ransom cash and Mathers received $1,000. Information against the lawyers was given, the indictment indicated, by Bates' wife, Clara Feldman, and her son, Edward Feldman. The lawyers' fees were paid to them by Edward Feldman, the indictment charged.

Chief Agent Brantley also disclosed today that the federal grand jury had indicted Mrs. Feldman, her son, and her brother-in-law, Alvin Scott, in connection with the Urschel case. These indictments resulted from the recovery recently of $46,000 of the ransom money in Oregon. Mrs. Feldman pleaded guilty this afternoon in federal court.

Brantley said the indictments constitute the final phase of the department's investigation in the Urschel case. He said all of the evidence in possession of the division of investigation has been presented to the grand jury.

TWO ON ICE FLOES FIGHT THREE HOURS TO ESCAPE, BUT DIE

Wildwood, N. J., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Jumping frantically from one bobbing ice cake to another, two unidentified men raced death across Delaware bay for three hours today before the ice floes swept them to death in the frigid water.

Trapped a mile from shore when their boat was crushed in the grinding ice, they scrambled wildly from ice cake to ice cake and were within reach of safety when tossed into the water.

A seaplane circled helplesaly overhead and two coast guard cutters plowed tantalizingly close, but not close enough as the men ran their race.

Athens, Tenn., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Nancy Mary Ann Trammel West, who gained wide publicity last summer when she said she was "80 years old and never had been kissed," died yesterday at her home near Topton, N. C. She was the mother of fourteen children, including triplets and twins. She was buried today at Topton.

STATE EXPECTED TO CLOSE TODAY IN INSULL TRIAL

Jury Hears Evidence on Rigging, 'Wash' Sales.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The amazing financial legerdemain of the interlocked Insull holdings and trading concerns, showing how dividends were pyramided and how the stock market was influenced in 1931, formed the closing testimony for the state yesterday in the Martin J. Insull embezzlement trial before Judge Cornelius J. Harrington in the Criminal court.

The state is expected to rest its case today. The defense is expected to be short, with the defendant himself taking the chief burden of overcoming the state's charges that he embezzled $344,720 of the funds of the Middle West Utilities company in 1931. The present prospect is for a verdict just before Christmas, which would appear to be a situation favorable to the defense.

Present "Rigging" Evidence.

The evidence of pyramided dividends, market rigging and "wash sales" was presented by the state witnesses, Wayne S. Murphy and Robert A. Knittle, special agents for the department of justice, who had worked for two years to prepare this material for the federal mail fraud case against Samuel Insull and his associates and who, therefore, had all these figures assimilated and sharply focused.

The evidence yesterday was admitted after scores of objections by the defense attorneys who have the material for a voluminous and technical bill of exceptions in the event of an unfavorable verdict.

It was shown that during the year 1930 and for nine months of 1931, just prior to the time when Martin Insull ordered the Middle West and subsidiary companies to invest $344,720 in stocks of Corporation Securities company and Insull Utility Investments, Inc., company, these companies had built up book profits of $16,033,858 by taking each other's dividends into income accounts at current market prices.

Try to Prove Manipulation.

The attempt was made through the witness Knittle to show these current market prices were manipulated by the Insull management. Examples were made of the month of September, 1931, just before the alleged embezzlement.

During that month the total volume of Corporation Securities units traded on the Chicago Stock exchange was 6,300. Of this amount the Utilities Securities company, the Insull trading concern, participated in 90 per cent of the transactions. They purchased 5,650 shares. They were on the sell side on other deals and on both the buy and sell sides in the third group of transactions.

The latter group is known as "wash sales." Judge Harrington asked an explanation of this and the witness said that it meant that this company bought 50 shares of stock, for instance, and sold the same shares at the same price on the same day. During the same month the so-called wash sales in Corporation Securities common stock amounted to 2,800 shares, the witness said.

Cite Heavy Trading.

The participation of the Insull company in trading in common stock of the Insull Utility Investments company for September, 1931, was 50 per cent of the total trading in these stocks, according to Knittle.

Murphy testified concerning the number of shares issued as stock dividends by the three Insull concerns involved and the way these were taken into the books of the other Insulls. Taking up each company in turn, he reached this summarization:

Total amount created on books of Insull Utility Investments company from stock dividends taken from Middle West Utilities and from Corporation Securities companies during 1930 and 1931—$8,016,602. This, it was shown, was an increase of $4,767,169 over what these same stocks were valued on the books of the issuing companies, or 146.7 per cent.

Total amount created on books of Corporation Securities company from stock dividends taken from Insull Utility Investments and Middle West Utilities companies for 1930 and 1931—$8,017,256. The total increase is not given for this company.

An example of the state method of accounting these books was given in the testimony as follows:

Q.—What was the net income of Insull Utility Investments company from Jan. 1, 1931, to September, 1931? A.—$5,046,368.

Q.—What part of this was from stock dividends taken at current market prices? A.—$4,378,437.

Q.—What proportion of these dividends came from Corporation Securities and from Middle West Utilities? A.—$1.4 per cent.

Q.—What were the cash dividends during the period? A.—$2,391,750.

Q.—Exclusive of stock dividends, what was the net income to meet this cash dividend? A.—$667,921.

Q.—What was the net income of Corporation Securities during this period? A.—$2,898,733.

Dividends, But a Deficit.

Q.—What were the cash dividends paid? A.—$1,640,933.

Q.—Exclusive of stock dividends, what was the net income to meet these dividends? A.—There was no income, but a deficit of $488,231.

It was shown, as an illustration of these methods, that in 1930 Insull Utility Investments issued 43,604 shares to Corporation Securities. These were carried at $20 a share on books of Insull Utility Investments. They were taken in as income by Corporation Securities and valued on the books at $2,552,559, an increase of 192 per cent.

The purpose of this evidence by the state is to enable the prosecutor to argue that when Insull was forced to take the stocks in these companies out of collateral of his private trading account with the Paul H. Davis company that he knew they were of little value when he turned them over to the stockholders of the Middle West company. It is the basis of the necessary proof of intent in the state's charge.

Cross-examination of Murphy was postponed until this morning. That of Knittle was directed chiefly at showing that his percentage of stock exchange transactions was made on an unfair basis, that it really should be cut in half.

NAMED AS ROBBER.

Plymouth, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—John Merryman, 33, Kokomo, was identified today by Dallas Andrews, bank messenger of the Union Bank and Trust company of Kokomo, as the robber who seized $800 from him on the steps of the Kokomo postoffice last August.

SECOND U. S. INSULL TRIAL ON CALL TODAY; GREEN TO ASK DELAY

United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, who returned to his desk yesterday from the crime conference in Washington, D. C., held a conference with Attorney Floyd E. Thompson concerning the Insull bankruptcy case due to be called before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson at 10 a. m. today.

Attorney Thompson said his clients, Samuel Insull, his son, and eight other former officials of the Corporation Securities company, will be in court to plead not guilty to the federal charge that they transferred funds from the company, knowing it to be insolvent. Mr. Green said the government would ask a general continuance, subject to call on five days' notice to all.

In regard to the government's plans for prosecution or abandonment of the case, Attorney Green declined to amplify his statement.

MAYOR SUPPORTS EXTENSIONS FOR TRACTION LINES

Requests Commission to Approve Petitions.

Mayor Kelly announced last night his support to petitions for transportation improvements filed with the Illinois Commerce commission by residents of neighborhoods where the community growth has exceeded that of the traction services.

In a communication to B. F. Lindheimer, commission chairman, the mayor urged the commission to give careful consideration to pending requests for service betterments and requested that the commission give decisions as quickly as possible.

Asks Completion of Valuation.

Asking also for a speedy completion of a valuation of all local transportation properties, Mayor Kelly declared this essential to a solution of the whole traction problem.

"It [the valuation] will be important in determining the financial structure of the companies which are operating, or will operate, our local transportation facilities, and as well a responsible rate of fare which will be consistent with the efficient operation of the facilities," wrote the mayor.

"Upon valuation, the question of a reduction in fare can be promptly determined. Such reduction, however, should not be made by a decrease in the wages of those employed in the operations of the properties, nor should it prevent a fair return upon the actual capital invested in the properties. If this valuation is made promptly we can then determine the kind and character of the ordinance to be adopted to settle the entire traction question."

Comments on Service Needs.

Petitions are pending before the commission for transportation facilities in sections of the city along North Ashland, North Central Park, North Laramie, Foster and Peterson avenues, and South Pulaski road. The mayor's comment on the needs of the sections follows:

"The existing street car service on Ashland avenue between Fullerton avenue and Irving Park boulevard now is totally inadequate, and should be supplemented by suitable facilities so as to provide service along this important section line street from Cortland street to Lawrence avenue.

"The mile between Kedzie avenue and Pulaski road is now devoid of any north and south common carrier in the entire six mile stretch from Madison street to Lawrence avenue. The same situation exists with respect to the mile between Cicero avenue and Central avenue.

Lawrence and Devon Avenues.

"There is at present no east and west transportation service between Lawrence and Devon avenues. This area is two miles in width and is well populated from the lake shore as far west as Kimball avenue. It seems apparent that there should be additional east and west service provided in this area on at least two streets such as Foster avenue and Peterson road.

"During the last few years there has been a noticeable industrial development of that portion of the southwest side in the general vicinity of Pulaski road. With the improvement of Pulaski road from 31st street to 71st street it seems to me that adequate transportation facilities should be supplied on this important section line street.

"There also are a number of gaps in east and west local transportation service which have existed for many years due to physical obstruction. It is my understanding that Pershing road between Halsted street and Ashland avenue, and 87th street between Cottage Grove and Stony Island avenues will shortly be open to public travel which will permit the installation of suitable transportation services there."

The mayor said he is aware also that other sections of the city require additional service, and he asked the commission to consider those problems as soon as the immediate necessities have been met.

YAWN SPASMS UNDER CONTROL, DOCTORS THINK

Woman Rests Easier After Seizure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Sterling, Ill., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—After yawning continuously for 192 hours, the exhausting attacks which nine days ago seized Mrs. Grace McKee, 27 year old wife of a Round Grove, Ill., farm hand, were believed to be under control tonight.

Announcing that the seizures appeared to be under control, Dr. H. L. Pettit of Morristown, Ill., attending physician for Mrs. McKee at the Sterling Public hospital, said that his examination of medical annals indicated Mrs. McKee had established a record both for the length of time and number of yawns.

Estimate 10,000 Yawns.

It was estimated Mrs. McKee at 6 o'clock tonight had yawned more than 10,000 times since the seizures began a week ago Sunday.

Dr. Pettit made his announcement after the periodic yawning ceased at 4 o'clock this afternoon and Mrs. McKee appeared to be resting easier. Shortly afterward, Dr. Theodore Stone, assistant professor of neurology at Northwestern university and assistant neurologist at the Michael Reese hospital, Chicago, arrived to donate his services as a consultant.

A consultation with Dr. Pettit and a dozen other physicians from Sterling was arranged. Then Dr. Stone announced that his diagnosis agreed with that of Dr. Pettit, that Mrs. McKee was suffering from emotional hysteria or spasms. Her trouble is functional rather than organic, physicians agreed.

Blame Worry for Seizure.

The most logical possibility, according to the physicians, is that Mrs. McKee is afflicted with encephalitis lethargica, an infection of the lower brain [medulla oblongata], which controls the nerves in the face and neck. The emotional hysteria is caused, in the belief of Dr. Pettit, from Mrs. McKee's continued worrying over the ill health of her husband, Harold, 36 years old.

The treatment applied by Dr. Pettit, consisting of injecting sedatives intravenously and administering sleeping potions, was termed by Dr. Stone the most successful for such a case.

ASK ROOSEVELT TO DROP POWER PLANT PROGRAM

Utilities Men Make Plea; Plan to Push Test.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The electric utilities carried to President Roosevelt today a plea to abandon his public ownership program which threatens them with extinction and millions of security holders with loss of their savings.

THOS. N. McCARTER

The plea was contained in a memorial of the Edison Electric institute, the utility clearing house, which was presented to the President by Thomas N. McCarter, president of the institute. Mr. McCarter said he had "a pleasant and agreeable interview" with Mr. Roosevelt and had his permission to make the memorial public.

Pledge Financing Reforms.

The utilities promise to effect the reforms in financing which Mr. Roosevelt so frequently criticizes, and then in the conclusion of their memorial they ask the government to join in a suit to test the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley authority, the existing menace to private utilities in the south and the like of which the President recently said he wants to see established in every state. The memorial indicated that in any event the utilities intend to contest the constitutionality of TVA.

Mr. McCarter, in the memorial, gave it as his own opinion that the government in the TVA experiment is exceeding its constitutional powers and infringing the sovereign rights of the state. He cited the joint opinion of Newton D. Baker, Democrat, and James M. Beck, Republican, that TVA is unconstitutional and the "similar conclusion" of United States Judge W. I. Grubb in a recent decision.

Test on Legality Urged.

"I assume," says the memorial, "that there is no one more interested than the government in having finally settled as soon as possible the constitutionality or legality of projects upon which it is proposed to spend hundreds of millions of dollars as to the legality of which such a doubt exists. I respectfully urge that parties interested and the government unite in taking such proceedings as will bring about a decision of the highest court in the land upon the question at the earliest moment possible. The institute itself is not desirous of becoming a party to litigation with the government, if indeed its status would enable it to do so, but its officers and trustees realize that in their respective companies they are trustees for all the employés and investors to whom reference is made in the earlier part of this statement, whose rights are entitled to protection."

In prefacing the memorial Mr. McCarter said he came in no spirit of antagonism, but filled with anxiety over the "grave crisis which now confronts this industry," an anxiety shared by the multitude of utility employés and investors. The development of the industry in 50 years he declared a substantial factor in the enormous development of the country in that time.

12 Billions Invested.

"There is invested in it some 12 billions of dollars by many millions of direct investors, and indirectly by many millions more through the ownership of the securities of these properties by life insurance companies, savings banks, stock fire insurance companies, and other corporations," the memorial continues.

"There is hardly any citizen of this country, possessing any qualities of thrift, who is not either directly or indirectly interested therein. The life insurance companies of the country hold approximately 1 billion 651 million dollars of the securities of these electric companies. The savings banks and trust companies hold 2 billion dollars.

"The companies composing this industry practically without exception are operating subject to thorough going regulation by state constituted tribunals. An overwhelming percentage of the business of the companies is intrastate as distinguished from interstate, under the definition of these respective kinds of commerce laid down by the Supreme court of the United States.

"Since the coming of state regulation, which has had an average existence of approximately 25 years, all that these companies have sought to earn, or have been allowed to earn, is a fair return upon the capital devoted by them respectively to the service of the public. This has been the yardstick generally applied by the state tribunals, and it has only been in plain cases where this rule has not been applied that the Supreme court of the United States has set aside rate decisions as confiscatory."

Admitting that in the "period of frenzied finance and in the era of wild speculation" abuses and acts "which cannot be defended crept into the manipulations of certain conspicuous holding company structures to the detriment of the public and the industry," Mr. McCarter said they were the exception and did not involve the "doings of operating companies." Such follies, he argued, were not confined to the utility industry.

Take "Vigorous Measures."

"The most extraordinary and vigorous measures," the memorial goes on, "are being taken and vast outlays of public money are being spent to bring the country out of this depression and to restore normal business conditions. Is it fair or is it helpful to this great objective to single out any one industry, or any two or three industries, and visit upon it or them alone destructive punishment?

"Can the doubt and fear created by such a policy, both within and without an industry, fail to have its effect upon the body politic at large in creating uncertainty and anxiety, with a consequent retarding effect upon general recovery. What the power of government can do to one industry can likewise be visited upon any other form of business. No industry will be free from this devastating possibility."

That electric power rates are unreasonably high, Mr. McCarter denies. They are regulated by state tribunals and they do not pay the cost of serving small consumers. Tax free public utilities financed by the government at low rates could, it is contended, furnish current at lower rates.

Asks if Policy Is Fair.

"Suppose all this to be true," says the memorial, "is it fair? Is it just to existing investment? Is it in keeping with the declared policy of the national recovery act to prevent unfair competition? Is it in the spirit of American fair play?"

The utilities pay a quarter of a billion dollars in taxes annually. Therefore, says the memorial, whatever saving in consumers' bills could be effected by public utilities "would be offset in whole or substantial part by an increase in taxation, which all citizens must bear, and the practical effect of which would be a subsidy to this undertaking, the cost of which would be borne by the nation at large."

There is now a power surplus, says the memorial, and full development of the projects of the government would create a surplus of from 150 to 200 per cent over anticipated requirements. The coal industry would be harder hit and the railroads would suffer loss of freight.

Points to Hours Cuts.

"The electric industry has gone along whole heartedly with the administration's recovery policy," the memorial continues. "It has shortened its hours of employment without diminution of wages. A large proportion of the industry is upon a five day week of 40 hours work. If there are improper practices or abuses of any kind now being carried on either by holding companies or by operating companies, the industry will welcome an opportunity to negotiate and arrange for their removal.

"It is respectfully submitted that more progress can be made along these lines than by governmental competition or strangulation. I pledge the industry to any coöperative effort along these lines and I seek similar coöperation on the part of the government."

CHICAGO CREDIT SURVEY PASSES BLAME AROUND

Banks, Borrowers, and U. S. Hit.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Banks, bank examiners, borrowers, and the government itself were criticized today for the sluggishness of commercial credit when the treasury department made public its survey of credit conditions in the Chicago federal reserve area.

The study, which was launched by the government to discover just how important the alleged "lack" of credit has been in retarding recovery, was conducted by Prof. Jacob Viner, adviser to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, and Prof. Charles O. Hardy.

"The total amount of this unsatisfied demand for credit is considerably smaller than is popularly believed," was the finding of the report, "but it is large enough to be a significant factor, among many others, in retarding business recovery."

Discusses "Good" Long Loans.

The report blamed banks for closing out good commercial loans and especially good real estate loans just because they were not of short maturity. It blamed bank examiners for classifying sound loans as "slow" merely because they were of long maturity. It blamed would-be borrowers for seeking bank loans in which the risk to the bank would be abnormal.

And it blamed the government itself, saying that the federal direct loans to industry in the Chicago area had done little to help the situation.

To correct these evils the report suggested that the category of "slow" loans in bank examinations be abolished, leaving only the two categories, "good" and "doubtful or lost." The report also suggested that the eligibility rules of the federal reserve banks be liberalized so that the reserve banks may discount paper maturing in 6 months instead of being limited to 60 day paper.

Would Change U. S. Loans.

The report also suggested that the government system of direct loans to industry through the federal reserve banks be junked, leaving such direct loans solely in the hands of the Reconstruction Finance corporation or a new intermediate credit system.

Secretary Morgenthau, who pointed out that the RFC, the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and the federal reserve board had coöperated with the treasury in the survey, said:

"It is a very useful report and will be very helpful to all four agencies on future lending policies and legislation."

In the official summary of its findings and recommendations the report said:

"Our findings consist of details scattered through the body of the report. We shall not attempt to summarize them all. Our more important findings are the following [all statements refer specifically to the Seventh federal reserve district].

"1. That there exists a genuine unsatisfied demand for credit on the part of solvent borrowers, many of whom could make economically sound use of working capital.

2. That the total amount of this unsatisfied demand for credit is considerably smaller than is popularly believed, but is large enough to be a significant factor, among many others, in retarding business recovery.

"3. That a very large proportion of would-be borrowers are persons whose equity in the business they control is so small that any bank or individual who lends them substantial amounts is assuming a major part of the risk of the business, rather than the normal risk of a creditor.

Capital Credit Needed.

"4. That there is a larger unsatisfied demand for long term working capital credit than for one turnover loans.

"5. That one of the most serious aspects of this unsatisfied demand is the pressure for liquidation of old working capital loans, even sound ones.

"6. That this pressure is partly due to a determination on the part of bankers to avoid a recurrence of the errors which are thought to have brought on the recent wave of bank failures.

"7. That it is also due in large part to the attitude of bank examiners, both state and national.

"8. That so far as small business is concerned, trade credit is much more easily obtained than is bank credit.

Direct Lending Unsuccessful.

"9. That efforts to relieve this stringency through direct lending on the part of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and the Chicago agency of the Reconstruction Finance corporation have so far had little effect on the general state of credit.

"10. That both agencies have incurred widespread unpopularity, largely because at the outset of their lending operations publicity was such as to arouse hopes that their policy would be more liberal than the law permits.

"11. That in terms of the existing law and its present official interpretation, the stafs of the two lending agencies just referred to are both doing efficient work.

"12. That existing restrictions on the use of funds to clear up existing debt interfere to a marked extent with the attainment of the purposes of the legislation by which the direct lending system was set up.

Some Detailed Recommendations.

Detailed recommendations are scattered throughout the main body of the report, of which the following are the more important:

"1. That banks should be encouraged to make sound working capital loans of six months' maturity and renew them indefinitly so long as [a] the borrower is able to pay interest out of current earnings, or has the prospect of adequate earnings over a reasonable period of time, and [b] his statement continues to reflect a sound position as to net working capital and net worth.

"2. That the rules of eligibility for rediscount at the federal reserve banks be modified so that paper shall not be ineligible merely because it has a maturity as great as six months, nor because of the number of times it has been renewed.

"3. That bank examiners be instructed to abandon the classification of loans as 'slow' so that loans will be criticized only on the basis of doubt as to their repayment or the certainty of loss and that examiners be more closely supervised and given more specific instructions by the examining authorities to assure greater uniformity of policy.

"4. That the reserve banks be relieved of the responsibility of making direct loans to industry. We make this recommendation because we believe that the extension of this type of credit conflicts with more important responsibilities of the reserve banks as supervisors of the lending and investment policies of the member banks.

"5. That if the reserve banks continue to make direct loans to industry, lending officials be given considerably greater latitude, by legislation if necessary, in making loans to clear up existing debt.

"6. That until the practice of the commercial banks has been liberalized along the lines indicated in recommendations numbers 1 to 3, above, the federal government continue to make direct loans to industry. This might be done either through the agency of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, or through a new intermediate credit system which might succeed to the responsibilities of the Reconstruction Finance corporation at the expiration of its present authority to make these loans. We make no recommendation as to which alternative should be followed."

In addition the report made eight specific recommendations for detailed liberalization of the RFC's direct loan work. Most of these recommendations had to do with allowing loans for debt repayment, allowing loans to the brewing industry, allowing regional RFC offices to approve loans up to $10,000, and various other relaxations.

"WRECK OF 97" AUTHOR WINS RIGHT TO SONG

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—(AP)—That celebrated song dear to the heart of railroad men—"The Wreck of Old 97"—was held today by the Supreme court to be the property of David Graves George of Gretna, Va., the author.

Hence, the court held, he can recover from the Victor Talking Machine company on profits it has made on the song.

The song recounted the efforts of a southern railway engineer on a passenger and mail train to make the trip from Lynchburg to Danville, Va., on time and thus uphold the finest traditions of the service.

Traveling at the greatest speed his engine would make in those days—1903—the train plunged from a trestle near Danville and six or seven persons were killed, most of them railroad employés.

George, who now lives in Detroit, was employed at a railway pumping station at Franklin Junction, Va. The next day he visited the scene of the wreck and was inspired to write a song commemorating it.

PROF. VINER RESIGNS AFTER COMPLETION OF CREDIT SURVEY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Prof. Jacob Viner, economic assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, announced today that he has resigned effective Thursday. Prof. Viner will return to his teaching duties at the University of Chicago.

Stressing the fact that he was leaving under perfectly friendly circumstances, Prof. Viner explained that he will be "on call" to help the treasury at any time the department requests his aid.

His current work was virtually completed when the credit survey in the Chicago area, which he has been supervising, was made public today. He has also been working on President Roosevelt's unemployment insurance and old age pension plans. This work also is practically finished.

No successor has been named, but Prof. Charles O. Hardy of Brookings institution, who helped Prof. Viner on the Chicago credit study, has been mentioned as a possible candidate.

PLANS FOR QUICK LINEUP OF WAR INDUSTRIES TOLD

12,000 Plant Contracts in Blank Kept Ready.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Elaborate war department plans for quick emergency mobilization of 12,000 privately owned firms into a vast war supplies network were revealed today before the senate munitions committee.

Blank contracts have been drawn, and statutes are ready for presentation to congress immediately upon a declaration of war, testified Lieut.-Col. C. T. Harris. He added that the lists and forms are constantly subjected to modernizing revisions.

These developments followed disclosures on the basis of which committee members contended that the du Pont account for the construction of the Old Hickory powder plant in Tennessee during the war, involving government expenditures of 125 million dollars, received "only a 10 per cent audit."

Officer Named as Salesman.

In addition a young marine officer, Lieut. Richard Cutts Jr., assigned as an aide at the White House only a year ago, was named as engaging in the sale of munitions while on the active roll of that service.

Lieut. Col. Harris, assigned by the war department to the committee to advise it on what could and could not be properly divulged in connection with military plans, took the stand as the committee turned its inquiry to procurement of military supplies. Representatives of the du Ponts and of several arms and ammunition companies also were witnesses.

The du Ponts were quick to dispute assertions by Senator Clark and Alger Hiss, committee investigator, that the war department had never properly audited the Old Hickory account. Previous evidence had shown this contract gave the du Pont company a gross profit of 1 million, 961 thousand dollars on an actual investment of $5,000.

Approve Profit Limitation.

Both Irenee and Pierre S. du Pont approved a war department plan to limit the profits of wartime contractors to 6 per cent of their investment. They suggested, however, that allowance should be made for bonuses paid by the contractors to speed up work and encourage invention.

"It seems to me," said Irenee du Pont, in response to Nye's question, "that fixing a definite percentage would eliminate the embarrassment of trusteeship to the stockholders and let the directors out."

JUDGE LECTURES DENTIST ON HIS CHOICE OF SHIRT

The shirt worn by Dr. Theron A. Akers, a dentist with offices at 7454 Cottage Grove avenue, was a subject of comment by Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort yesterday. Dr. Akers was before the court on the motion of his divorced wife, Verna, 7646 Stewart avenue, that he be held in contempt for being $500 in arrears in his support payments for their daughter, Miriam, 6 years old.

"I see you're wearing a nice shirt," Judge Desort observed. "In other appearances you've worn an old blue one, perhaps to convince this court that you're financially straitened. Well, you'd better bring $50 here next Friday or go to jail for contempt."

Attorney J. J. Simpson for the dentist said his client could not pay because his patients were slow in settling. Attorney Norman Becker for Mrs. Akers pointed out that Dr. Akers had remarried and was maintaining his offices despite the fact that the contempt action has been pending since last summer.

LEARNS SHE LOST KEYS AS TRIBUNE RECOVERS THEM

Through a free service offered by the Tribune Public Service and Want Ad office, Miss Elvia May Harris, 6411 Kenwood avenue, recovered a bunch of keys Friday before she realized they were lost.

The keys were found on the sidewalk near her home Friday afternoon by Mrs. Fletcher Cole, 6439 Kenwood avenue. Following the instructions on the metal key tag Mrs. Cole telephoned to the Tribune Public Service office and learned the keys were registered in the name of Miss Harris. When Miss Harris returned an hour later to the apartment hotel where she lives she was notified by THE TRIBUNE that her keys had been found. Not until she looked in her purse did Miss Harris realize she had lost them.

The key service is available to any one filling out the necessary registration card at the Public Service office. Instructions for calling the Public Service office, where the name of the owner is on file, are contained on the metal tag given each applicant.

LONG MEASURES TO EXTEND RULE IN HOUSE TODAY

Higher Taxes and School Control Proposed.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Senator Huey Long's legislative program to tighten his grip over Louisiana was advanced in the house tonight to a position for final enactment tomorrow as a "mystery" session of the senate stirred new rumors.

The legislation increases the tax on corporations, extends the political authority of Long over local government and even gives his administration control over the hiring of school teachers.

A business session of the senate was called to order at 8 o'clock, but it was promptly adjourned until tomorrow night at the same hour when it will receive the bills from the house.

"No Business" for Senate.

Senator Coleman Lindsey, administration leader, last night announced the session of the senate for tonight and said there might be "some business" before it, but tonight the same senator informed the presiding officer that there was "no business" and moved adjournment.

Lindsey's first announcement aroused speculation in some quarters that a report might be made tonight to the senate on Long's legislative committee investigation of the "corruption" of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley's "old regular" politicians in the New Orleans city administration, against which many of Long's dictatorial policies are aimed in his efforts to wrest the city from Walmsley's control.

Explanations Are Sketchy.

The bills drawn by Long, which were approved today after sketchy explanations by the senator, were placed in order for passage tomorrow under suspension of the rules.

There was no discussion of the bills in the house and not a voice was raised in opposition to the rapid progress made.

The anti-Long minority membership in the house contented themselves with conversing in the aisles while the "kingfish" strode over the chamber back-slapping and exchanging persiflage. Routine completed, the house adjourned until 10 a. m.

EVANGELINE BOOTH TURNS DOWN PROPOSAL BY CHICAGO SUITOR

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Evangeline Booth, 68 year old new commander in chief of the Salvation Army, says a Chicago man proposed to her there recently but she turned him down.

Speaking at a Salvation Army meeting in Ulster hall last night, Gen. Booth said the Chicagoan, whose name she did not give, told her the time is coming when she should seriously consider the question of marriage.

"I have," Gen. Booth said she replied. "That is the reason I am single."

The army leader also said she does not think much of present day fashions.

"I would back my bonnet against some of the postage stamp hats they are wearing in New York and elsewhere," she asserted. "They have their back to the front and the front to the back, so you don't know whether the wearer is coming or going."

Coroner's Jury Holds Man and Woman in Stabbing

A coroner's jury investigating the fatal stabbing on Saturday night of Henry Barth Jr., 1019 North 12th street, Melrose Park, recommended yesterday that James O. Bland, 28 years old, 415 South 19th avenue, Maywood, be held to the grand jury for murder. The jury advised that Mrs. Susan Gorman, 35 years old, be held as an accessory. Mrs. Gorman is the wife of a former Chicago policeman now serving a prison term for manslaughter.

BOY WHO SAVED DAD'S LIFE WINS SCOUTING AWARD

Charles Dudley Hoffman, 13 years old, 9429 Justine street, was awarded a letter of commendation last night by the Court of Honor of the Chicago organization of the Boy Scouts of America. The award was in recognition of his skill in first aid by which he saved his father's life on Nov. 20. While trying to open a window the elder Hoffman shattered the glass and cut arteries in both arms. Charles applied tourniquets as he had been taught to do in scout work, and, according to hospital officials, prevented his father from bleeding to death before medical aid could be obtained. The presentation was made in the city council chambers by Samuel Gorsline, chairman of the Court of Honor.

GIVES UP EAGLE; SAYS CODE KEEPS WORKERS IDLE

The Isana Products Company, Inc., 4415 Lawrence avenue, manufacturers of beauty shop supplies, yesterday sent to Washington the Blue Eagle the concern was asked to surrender for violation of the industry's code. At the same time L. H. Truettner, president of the company, explained his position in a letter to the NRA compliance division.

"It is our understanding that the purpose of the code is to put more people to work," the letter said. "In our case it had the opposite effect. The officers of this firm are doing a large amount of work that they would like to hire employés to do, because of the high wage scale erected by the code for the most simple unskilled labor."

FLYERS PREDICT OCEAN SERVICE IN TWO YEARS

Aviation Day Celebrants Look to Stratosphere.

His flight demonstrated the practicability of night flights and led congress to appropriate funds for lighting of the airways.

Each of the men has flown more than 1,250,000 miles. Just how much more is unknown because this is the record of their log books. Both, however, had been flying for years before they began to keep logs of their time in the air.

In Chicago yesterday civilian pilots, air corps reservists, and Illinois National Guard officers made flights at 10:30 o'clock to commemorate the first flight in a plane made by Wilbur and Orville Wright just 31 years ago. They were joining in the celebration which took place at 1,400 airports throughout the nation. The memorial ceremonies were planned by Eugene L. Vidal, head of the aeronautics branch, department of commerce.

HONOR WRIGHT BROTHERS.

Dayton, O., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Orville Wright and chiefs of the nation's athree aviation branches joined here today in celebrating national aviation day. Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the army air corps; Rear Admiral Ernest L. King, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics, and Eugene L. Vidal, chief of the bureal of air commerce, represented the nation.

While planes wheeled overhead the government leaders visited Woodland cemetery and placed a wreath on the grave of Wilbur Wright. Then they went to the home of Orville to express their compliments. The inventor still is one of the country's leading authorities on aviation.

New York Watches 100 Planes.

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—New York paid its tribute to the Wright brothers today. Almost a hundred planes were in the air at 10:30 a. m., the hour set for the nationwide celebration. Fifty took part in the roaring demonstration high above Manhattan.

In close formations the military planes raced, the drone of their powerful engines echoing and reechoing through the trade canyons of the city. Trafic below was virtually at a standstill for the few minutes that the flocks of war birds zipped across the skies.

The army and National Guard here put thirty-six planes into the air as a tribute to Orville Wright. While the observance was taking place, big air liners came and went. At 10:30 a. m. stewardesses and co-pilots reminded passengers that winged transportation was born just 31 years ago.

WOMAN KILLED, TWO HURT WHEN TRAIN HITS CAR

Mrs. Inez Spalding, 40 years old, 1811 South 5th avenue, Maywood, was killed last night when an automobile in which she was riding was struck by a Chicago, Aurora & Elgin train at 1st avenue in Maywood. Mary Cline, 6 years old, niece of Mrs. Spalding, and John H. Seman, driver of the car, were injured.

William Pfeil, 240 Wisconsin avenue, Villa Park, watchman at the crossing, told police the crossing gates were down as the car approached, but that Seman had driven through them.

Two other deaths increased the Cook county motor toll for 1934 to 1,204. The victims:

William O'Dowd, 40 years old, 5526 Aberdeen street. Died in the Holy Cross hospital of injuries incurred Sunday when a parked car in which he was sitting was struck at 51st street and Crawford avenue by a machine driven by Joseph Wasielewski, 4128 West 21st street.

Christ Gramanis, 40 years old, 3380 Milwaukee avenue. Died in Belmont hospital early today of injuries received early yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven by Joseph Kosek, 4943 Belle Plaine avenue, at Milwaukee and Karlov avenues.

STEEL OBJECT FALLS IN PARK; PLANE ABOVE

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Narrowly missing several children as they were playing in Central park today, a steel pear shaped object, about four inches long and weighing between 10 to 15 pounds, fell out of the sky and imbedded itself six inches deep in the ground.

John Maier, a concessionaire who rents out ponies for children, was only a few feet away as the object whizzed past. Startled, he looked up and saw an airplane far overhead. But it was so high that he was unable to observe any distinguishing markings, or even to tell what type of plane it was.

The air service division of the police was unable to identify the object. Army and navy aviation officers at nearby fields were also at a loss to account for it.

GERMAN TOWN HONORS PARENTS AT BAPTISM OF THEIR 25TH CHILD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSBACH, Baden, Germany, Dec. 17.—A procession with three brass bands accompanied Adam Schmaetz, a 61 year old laborer, and his 58 year old wife, to church today for the christening of their twenty fifth child. The entire population turned out for the festivities.

Members of the local fire brigade acted as joint godfathers. They promised to provide the child with clothes and an education.

This family of 25 children has established a record in Nazi Germany. The local press points out that the family is so poor it possesses only two beds. Appeals have been made to the public to assist the Schmaetz household.

ST. PETERSBURG NOTED AS BENCH SITTING CAPITAL

City Has Facilities for 48,000 to Sit.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—This is the bench sitting capital of the world, if any city can be given this title. With a 1930 census of 42,000 permanent residents, the resort town has 12,000 benches in its downtown district with a total capacity for 48,000 to sit and think, or just to sit at one time.

Benching is one of the most popular sports among the winter visitors, who totaled 225,000 last year but will probably aggergate 260,000 this season for an all-time record. Sitting is able to keep its following notwithstanding strong rivalry from horse shoes, outdoor checkers, shuffle board, and fishing.

Not Endurance Contest.

Sitting is not strictly an endurance contest although some recognition is given to the resorters who return to an afternoon in the sun after a morning session on the benches. There are local rules which score for style and form.

Under the St. Petersburg regulations, conversations are encouraged between visitors from different parts of the country with nothing in common except possible a mutual experience on a surgical table. Either north or south may lead and there is no dummy. A favorite lead is a remark about the weather; thereafter it's anybody's game.

Benching typifies the general character of St. Petersburg as a quiet and retiring winter resort free from the carnival or social whirl of some of the east coast cities. On Sunday afternoon, between 2,000 and 3,000 join in mass singing. Tourists clubs, each representing some northern state, have weekly meetings. The shuffle board club had 6,000 members last year.

Salt Air and Sunlight.

Located on a narrow peninsula at the mouth of Tampa bay, the city of palms, banyan trees, and modest but luxurious winter homes is almost surrounded by salt water affording bathing and fishing. Sun bathing is popular. The Evening Independent makes no charge for its paper on days that the sun doesn't shine. In 24 years 116 editions have been distributed free.

THE TRIBUNE roadster, arriving here on its tour of winter resorts, found many other automobiles with Illinois licenses. Chicago contributes more visitors to this resort than any other city in the United States. Seventy-six per cent arrive by motor car. The distance is approximately 1,300 miles, all paved.

FOG BLANKET, 5 MILES DEEP, FORCES BYRD FLYERS TO TURN BACK

LITTLE AMERICA, Antartica, Dec. 17.—[Via Mackay radio.]—(AP)—A flight crew of five men under Chief Pilot Harold I. June was turned back today by a wall of clouds in what was probably the last attempt of the expedition to extend by flight the coast line of Marie Byrd land.

The clouds and fog, five miles deep, rolled to the northeast and south for more than an hour before the flyers, at an altitude of 14,500 feet, were forced back. Rarely did June get a glimpse of the mountain peaks.

When the plane took off it carried 800 gallons of gasoline, and the plan called for a flight of 150 nautical miles to the east, tracing the coast line. Just as the plane turned into a heavy cloud bank there was a flurry of excitement as one of the tanks ran dry. Before June could cut in another tank the starboard engine became cold and began to misfire. The ship lost altitude but was soon nursed back again. A forced landing would have been disastrous.

CHICAGO YOUTH DRIVER IN FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—John Stuart Jr., 25, of 1500 Lake Shore drive, Chicago, a student at Princeton university, was released on $100 bail today upon arraignment in Homicide court in connection with the death of a fellow student, Prynne Hoxie, 21, of St. Louis, Mo., who was killed early this morning in an automobile accident.

Hoxie, who was a nephew of the late Ivy Lee, New York public relations counsel for John D. Rockefeller, was fatally injured when the car in which he was riding sideswiped an elevated structure pillar. Stuart, who was driving, said the accident occurred when he swerved the machine to get off the street car tracks.

Assistant District Attorney Max Weider told the magistrate, before whom Stuart was taken on a technical charge of homicide, that detectives had found no evidence of criminal negligence on the part of any one concerned in the accident. The case will be heard Wednesday.

Stuart is the son of the president of the Quaker Oats company. The senior Stuart is a life trustee of Princeton university and a member of the class of 1900.

PREACHER'S WIFE IN SLAYING TRIAL IS FOUND SANE

Lebanon, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—A commission of three physicians, appointed by the court to determine the sanity of Mrs. Neoma Saunders, on trial here for the murder of her husband, Gaylord V. Saunders, reported this afternoon that Mrs. Saunders is mentally sound.

Neither state nor defense attorneys questioned the physicians. Dr. W. H. Williams, Dr. E. R. Rainey, and Dr. W. H. Spieth, all of Lebanon. Saunders, until three days before his murder in Indianapolis Feb. 2, was pastor of a Methodist Episcopal church at Wabash, Ind. The widow and Theodore Mathers and Masil Roe, both youths, are charged with first and second degree murder. Mathers is to be tried at an early date.

Each side will have three hours for closing arguments. The case should go to the jury tomorrow afternoon.

Answering an intricate hypothetical question, Dr. O. C. Higgins, Lebanon physician, prior to the report of the sanity commission, said that in his opinion Mrs. Saunders, at the time of the crime and for some time after, was temporarily insane. John J. Kelly, chief Marion county prosecutor, vehemently objected that the question had been grossly in violation of proper legal ethics.

Baldridge, of the medical faculty, University of Iowa, who was killed in an automobile accident in Iowa on Nov. 22. It will be the first degree of this kind ever conferred at the University of Chicago. Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the university, will preside.

WORLD'S BUSIEST AIR LINE SCORES 7 TIMES AS PIONEER!

By EDWIN C. HILL, The Flying Reporter

● Chicago—Pilot Jack Knight one of United's "Million Milers" let me listen to a weather report from a plane four hundred miles west. "Two way radio telephones may seem marvelous to you," said Knight, "but you should see the many advances I've seen grow out of this company's 75 million miles of experience.

"I'd say there are at least six other pioneering developments that helped to make United the world leader it is: The perfection of night flying with passengers—the first coast-to-coast service. The only line to have two pilots and a stewardess on every plane. United developed ground equipment, and special plane devices to simplify flying. I could name you a dozen more."

Next time fly with United. Take advantage of all this 8 years of pioneering. United flies the direct Mid-Continent route and the Pacific Coast airway from Vancouver, Canada, to Agua Caliente, Mexico.

Shortest route to New York! Most frequent service. Cleveland 2 hours. Philadelphia 4¾ hours. Kansas City 3 hours. United offers overnight service to Los Angeles. San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle. (Or leave on one of the day trips and enjoy western scenery over the popular Mid-Continent route)

SWEITZER SUES TO RECOVER HIS COUNTY PAY CUT

Joins with Seven Others in Mandamus Actions.

County Treasurer Robert M. Sweitzer yesterday joined the list of public officials who accepted pay reductions in 1931 but who now want to collect their full salaries.

Sweitzer filed an intervening petition in the Circuit court for a mandamus to compel the county board to pay him the salary cut, which amounts to about 15 per cent of his salary of $9,000 as county clerk from 1931 until this year, when he retired to become treasurer.

By filing the petition Sweitzer joined the mandamus suit of Frank J. Kaspar, which earlier had been joined by Homer J. Byrd. Kaspar and Byrd were defeated last month for reëlection as county commissioners.

Mandamuses Won by Two.

In all, eight former county officials have sued for their back pay, and two, John A. Swanson, former state's attorney, and Charles Weber, former commissioner, have won mandamus orders. The others with suits pending, besides the five named heretofore, are Mrs. Grace Fleming, former county commissioner; George Seif, former Criminal court clerk, who now is a sanitary district trustee, and Edward R. Litsinger, former member of the old board of review.

In granting mandamuses for Swanson and Weber, Circuit Judge Joseph Burke said that under the law he had no other course.

The law provides that the pay of elective county officials may neither be raised nor lowered during their terms in office. Thus, in effect, the pay cuts voted for county officials during the economy wave were illegal. Members of the state's attorney's office said there is no legal means of opposing the mandamus suits.

4,000 Employés Can't Recover.

Not so fortunate, however, are the 4,000 appointive county employés who shared in the pay cut. Since the county board, which by law has the proper authority, arbitrarily dictated the reductions, the appointive employés have no recourse.

There will be no recourse, moreover, for present county officials whose salaries under the tentative 1935 budget will be reduced by $1,000 each. These include the new county commissioners and the two members of the board of tax appeals. The reductions in their pay were ordered by the outgoing board and are therefore legal. Salaries for the 4,000 appointive employés in 1935 will also be about 15 per cent below the 1931 base.

Those eligible to recover, and their yearly salaries before the cut, are the holders of these offices from 1931 to 1934; assessor, $15,000; state's attorney, $15,000; coroner, $10,000; sherif, $10,000; treasurer, $10,000; clerk, $9,000; recorder, $9,000; clerks of the Superior, Circuit, Criminal and Probate courts, $9,000 each; two members of the board of tax appeals, $7,500 each; and 15 county commissioners, $7,500 each. In addition the five members of the old board of assessors and the three members of the old board of review, both of which were abolished in 1932, can recover 15 per cent of their 1931 salaries of $7,500 each.

Sweitzer Explains Action.

Sweitzer, explaining his action in joining the mandamus suit, said: "I wanted to be on the same basis as the other former officials. The county is now better off financially than when the cuts were voted, and I take the position that if the others are entitled to repayment, so am I. It is unfortunate that the county employés cannot recover."

Not all those who voted for the cut originally share Sweitzer's view. Among these are County Commissioners George Miller, William Busse, Daniel Ryan and Peter M. Kelly. All four, holdover members of the county board, declared yesterday that they will not seek to recover the pay reduction.

"I'm surprised at these suits," Commissioner Kelly said. "The cuts were made in good faith, and I am keeping my part of the agreement. The new budget contains no provision for these back salaries, which would amount to about $200,000 if every one eligible sued. Such an eventuality might wreck the financial plans of the county. Certainly these suits are not helping to get the county finances out of the red."

SHOT BY WOMAN; DIES.

Walter Tribling, 40 years old, 58 East 32d street, colored, died in the county hospital early yesterday of a bullet wound inflicted during a quarrel with Gertrude Matthews, 40 years old, colored, in her home at 120 East 32d street.

Employes of Two Store Chains Enlist.

BY PHIL MAXWELL.

Two telephone calls ten minutes apart yesterday brought 64 Good Fellows to THE TRIBUNE'S campaign to take Christmas baskets of food and toys to unfortunate families.

Fifty employés of the Goldblatt Brothers' five Chicago stores will each take a basket, and the managers of the Stineway Drug company, operating 13 stores, will take 14 baskets. The extra basket was added by the managers in order to avoid any jinx over the number 13.

Many Contributions Received.

Contributions of various kinds are pouring into THE TRIBUNE'S Good Fellow department, at 1 South Dearborn street. In addition to those who themselves will take Good Felow baskets hundreds are sending in money to the fund. To date $1,082 has been received. This money will be used by THE TRIBUNE for the purchase of Good Fellow baskets and will be delivered by this newspaper's circulation trucks the day before Christmas.

Mrs. Ernest R. Graham, president of the Chicago Babies Free Milk fund, in behalf of this organization, will donate coupons redeemable by the families for a quart of milk from any milk dealer in Chicago. These coupons will be placed in the baskets.

200 Candy Filled Stockings.

Through the generosity of the Young Democrats of Cook County, 200 stockings filled with candy also will be put in THE TRIBUNE'S delivered baskets. Miss Helen Silhanek, who works in the office of Mayor Kelly, herself one of the leaders in this group, will call a meeting of the 700 members and from it she hopes many Good Fellows will be recruited.

There is still plenty of time to become a Good Fellow. Pick up your telephone and call the Good Fellow department's headquarters, Superior 0100. Or fill in the coupon adjoining this story. You will be given the name of a deserving family that will have a gloomy Christmas unless you play Santa Claus to it. These families have been thoroughly investigated by the Christmas clearing house of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies.

PUPILS PREPARE GOOD FELLOW BASKET

Otto F. Aken, superintendent of Cook county schools, beside Emil Kochlefl, president of the Achievement club, at the Avoca club in Wilmette, and other pupils who prepared a sample Good Fellow basket. Students from county schools will distribute 300 similar baskets the day before Christmas.

The Bridewell workshop floor is covered with playthings delivered in quantities daily by the police department. In the women's department dolls are being repaired and outfitted in new clothes. The institution's tailor shop is renovating old clothes. The whole job is under the direction of Supt. Edward J. Denemark, who originated the toy workshop idea several years ago.

WHAT WHITE HOUSE CHILDREN WANT FOR CHRISTMAS STOCKING

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—(AP)—The White House children also have Christmas wants.

Buzzie wants a toy motorcycle.

Sistie and Buzzie both want musical instruments for noise making.

Sara wants dolls and all the trimmings.

Such was the report of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt on the letters her grandchildren wrote to Santa.

Sistie and Buzzie are the children of the President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Dall. Sara is the daughter of the President's son, James.

Another small grandson, William Donner Roosevelt, age 2, son of Elliott, is a guest at the White House, but he evidently is too little to know just what he most desires. The same is true of Elliott's baby daughter, Ruth.

BATTLE OF RIVAL CICERO FACTIONS FLARES IN COURT

A political fight between the village president and the board of trustees in Cicero which has resulted in the naming of two jobholders for nearly every appointive town office was aired yesterday before Chief Justice Burke of the Circuit court. The hearing was on the suit brought by Attorney Joseph E. Lustfield, former attorney and secretary for the board of police and fire commissioners, to collect $2,700 in back pay for 1933 and part of 1932.

The court hearing became complicated when two town attorneys, one from the faction controlled by President Joseph G. Cerny and the other appointed by the trustees appeared and claimed to be the authorized counsel for the town. At the same time two town prosecutors made their appearance in court.

After much discussion, Judge Burke issued an order directing payment of the back salary after Attorney Lustfield testified that he had never been legally dismissed.

G. O. P. ACTS TO PICK CANDIDATE FOR MAYORALTY

In order to make a thorough search the Republican city central committee at its meeting in the La Salle hotel yesterday named a subcommittee of twelve to select a Republican candidate for mayor in the February primary. The subcommittee represents the three major sections of the city.

On the motion of William E. King, state senator-elect, the central committee also adopted a resolution holding that the relief problem is far from solved and that local transportation and other utility rates must come down.

CHICAGO PARKS WILL CONDUCT YULE FESTIVAL

A community holiday festival, to be held in three sections of the city with a finale in Grant park on Dec. 30, will be presented by the recreation division of the Chicago Park district, V. K. Brown, director of the division, said yesterday.

It is expected that more than 500 singers, many now organized in church choirs and various choruses, will participate in the festival, in addition to radio and stage stars who are to be recruited as soloists, Mr. Brown said.

The festival programs, titled "Shadows of the Manger," will include Christmas songs and carols and a series of posed silhouette scenes with unusual illuminating effects.

The schedule of festival programs was announced by Mr. Brown as follows: Sunday, Dec. 23, 5 p. m., East End park, Hyde Park boulevard and 53d street; Wednesday, Dec. 26 8 p. m., Humboldt park, Augusta boulevard and Kedzie avenue; Friday, Dec. 28, 8 p. m., Lincoln park bandstand, near North avenue, and Sunday Dec. 30, 5 p. m., 6:30 p. m. and 8 p. m., Congress street plaza in Grant park.

CORRECT SALES TAX BILL SIGNED, ASSERTS HORNER

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Gov. Horner today disposed of the report that the legislature, in its recent record breaking special session, made the error of amending the wrong sales tax law. He stated that the foundation for the report was the printing of the first draft of the act, which made the error of citing the old sales tax act as the measure to be amended.

"The bill was all right when it came to me to be signed," said the governor, "and the record shows that this was the same bill which went through both houses. As explained to me, there was an error in the first draft of the bill. This was caught in proofreading and a new draft was made. However, a copy of the first draft was, by mistake, sent to the printer. The mistake was discovered in time, so that the validity of the act is not affected."

Dewitt Billman of the legislative reference bureau, where the bill was prepared, says the correct bill was passed in both houses; and that there was no loss of time by reason of the error in sending the wrong draft to the printer.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The date of the memorial services to be held at the Marshall High school, 3250 West Monroe street, for the late Dr. Max Batt, faculty adviser to the student publications in the school, was incorrectly given as Monday in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. The services wil be tomorrow at 9 p. m.

In an item Friday it was erroneously stated that Mrs. Barbara Patchen was represented by Attorney Lloyd A. Faxon in her petition to have her husband's divorce set aside. She was represented by Attorney Frank T. Sharp.

Charges High Taxes Drive Wine Making Into Homes

High taxes cause three-fourths of the wine consumed in Illinois to be made in the basements of consumers, George Huckins, chairman of the California Wineries association of Chicago, declared yesterday at a meeting of distributors in the Congress hotel. "Although the state collected revenue of $250,000 on 1,000,000 gallons of wine this year," he said, "another 3,375,000 gallons made in basements escaped taxation. The latter figure represents 1,731 cars of fresh grapes."

FEELING OF RAGE AGAINST BRITISH GROWS IN SAAR

Territory Tense as Result of Street Brawl.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Territory, Dec. 17.—The feeling of hostility against Englishmen and other foreigners holding administrative jobs was at fever heat within this territory today as a result of yesterday's mobbing of a British police captain and the wounding of a Saar civilian by a bullet.

Foreigners are particularly anxious and are eagerly awaiting the arrival of international troops dispatched at the request of the league of nations. The troops are due this week, some already having arrived in France from England.

Saarites Voice Resentment.

Saarites openly are expressing resentment against international control prior to the Jan. 13 plebiscite when residents will vote on whether to return to Germany, go over to France, or remain under league control. That the residents will vote in favor of returning to Germany is a foregone conclusion.

Col. Geoffrey G. Knox, British head of the Saar governing commission, has turned what league officials call a minor incident over to the judicial authorities.

The judicial authorities were requested to decide whether or not charges should be filed against either Capt. James Justice, British member of the Saar international police force, and his companion, the earl of Aylesford, or the group of Saarites who attacked and beat the two men.

Justice, who has been suspended from the police force, left the hospital where he was treated for injuries suffered in the mob's attack on him after the car he was driving had run down a woman and a man had been struck by a bullet from his pistol.

Claim Captain Was Intoxicated.

Eye witnesses to the brawl alleged that the police captain was intoxicated. They said the crowd became enraged because Fräulein Kathe Braun, a German woman, was in the Briton's car.

Meanwhile, authorities began an investigation of a complaint by Prince Hubertus von Loewenstein, a German exile. He charged he had been insulted by British officers in a cafe. The prince reported that Capt. Arthur Helmsley of England, the chief of the Saar police force, was in the group.

Because of the growing tension within the Saar the Supreme Plebiscite court postponed indefinitly the trial of the leader of the German Front and four others on charges brought by the league governing commission. The trial was scheduled for Dec. 21.

Germans Are Bitter.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—Propaganda Minister Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels today characterized the Saar incident in which an Englishman was beaten by a mob and a Saar resident shot as "boozing carousal." In an article in Der Angriff, the propaganda minister said:

"It is well known that the English while under the influence of liquor are apt to lose control of themselves in a much worse way than the Germans."

Other newspapers accused Col. G. G. Knox, head of the Saar governing commission, of "confusing the issue" in his report of the occurrence. It was charged that the incident was preceded by a gay party attended by league police officials at a beer hall known as an "anti-Nazi hangout."

"We are counseling discipline to the people of the Saar," German officials said. "Nevertheless, we cannot guarantee that order will be kept."

Gives Torn Shoes to Nazi Winter Relief; Put in Jail

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, Germany, Dec. 17.—A former high government official under the old régime, who is alleged to have been receiving a monthly pension of 710 marks [about $284], has been taken into protective custody by the secret state police. His wife also is held. This action is said to have become necessary because of indignation created when the couple were reported to have sent a Nazi winter relief organization three Christmas parcels containing torn shoes and shirts and a hat with a hole in it. All unfit for wear.

MacDonald Rejects Nye's Offer of Arms Documents

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald today refused pointblank to accept at the present time Senator Nye's recent offer of documents unearthed by the senate's inquiry on arms trafic. Under a bombardment of questions in the house of commons the prime minister said it was up to the forthcoming British commission of inquiry to accept or refuse Senator Nye's offer.

DRIVER JAILED AS SLAYER.

Logansport, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—At the conclusion of the inquest today into the death of Mrs. Anna Durbin, 60, injured fatally in an auto accident Dec. 6, Charles Bugby, 24, driver of the second machine, was jailed on a charge of manslaughter.

32 BOMB BLASTS ALARM HAVANA; 90 SEIZED IN RAIDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 17.—Damage estimated at $10,000 was caused in the department of labor today when a five pound bomb exploded in the offices of Secretary of Labor Rogelio Pina. Thirty-one other bombs exploded in various parts of the city during the evening. Six persons were injured.

The searching of vehicles and persons for firearms and explosives was increased today by police and soldiers with the discovery of explosives on five omnibuses. They were running on the central highway toward Havana and were captured six miles south of Havana. The omnibuses were en route from Matanzas and Santa Clara cities, according to the police.

More than ninety drivers, passengers, the line's operators and others were jailed. They are suspected of being connected with a terrorist plot which was scheduled to take place here tonight. More than 6,000 pounds of dynamite and nitroglycerin, fuses, wires, and loaded bombs were confiscated.

PARAGUAY ARMY HEAD TURNS DOWN LEAGUE'S TERMS

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Gen. Jose Estigarribia, head of the Paraguayan Chaco forces, has told the foreign office that in his opinion the league of nations' peace plan is unacceptable to Paraguay, it was learned authoritatively today.

The foreign office had nothing to say. It had originally asked Gen. Estigarribia for his opinion. It was conceded in semi-official circles, however, that the general's attitude means Paraguay is almost certain to reject the league's proposals for a truce and a directed conference to settle on terms of permanent peace with Bolivia.

The Paraguayans today were menacing two Bolivian departments beyond the Chaco, it was stated here. Reports from the front were that fighting has already started in the Villa Montes sector for possession of that vital Bolivian base.

COAL MINER KILLED.

Hillsboro, Ill., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—James Tuchi, 53, coal miner, was killed by falling slate in mine No. 10 of the Indiana and Illinois Coal corporation at Nokomis this afternoon.

STEAMER RADIOS FOR AID; RUDDER BROKEN IN GALE

Liners Rush to Position Off Irish Coast.

BULLETIN.

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Mackay radio late tonight picked up a message from Land's End, England, reporting the arrival of a British ship, "probably the Beaverdale," at the side of the Sisto.

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Lashed by the most devastating storms to sweep the North Atlantic in many winters, the tiny Norwegian freighter Sisto sent out an SOS call tonight pleading for "urgent assistance."

Immediately all wireless stations, both in the British Isles and in America, concentrated for further messages from the vessel, but no further word was forthcoming.

The exact nature of the vessel's danger could not be learned, but apparently it had lost its rudder.

Liners Start to Aid.

At once a number of liners made at top speed for the position given by the Sisto, which was between 200 and 300 miles off the Irish coast in the northernmost shipping channel.

Like the British freighter Usworth, which this week foundered in the same storm with a loss of 17 men, the Sisto was among the last vessels to clear the port of Montreal before the closing of the St. Lawrence.

The Sisto, a 1,120 ton vessel built more than 20 years ago in Bergen, Norway, left Quebec on Nov. 23 after calling at Cleveland and Detroit.

The American liner President Harding was believed to be closest to the distressed freighter. Its master notified New York he was prepared to give assistance.

Europa on the Way.

A few moments later the great liner Europa radioed it also was on its way.

Two other American vessels the Manhattan and the American Banker, joined in the search.

From Lloyd's in London it was learned the Sisto's "rudder apparently was broken in hurricane and tremendous seas." Lloyd's message apparently was picked up from the British freighter Valencia.

Seize Brother of Killer as a Robbery Suspect

Joseph Breen, 45 years old, 6108 Dorchester avenue, and James Casey, 42 years old, 7308 Kenwood avenue, were arrested as robber suspects by Police Sergeant James Greer at 63d street and Dorchester avenue last night. Breen was carrying a pistol. He is a brother of Jay Breen, who was found insane after he shot and killed Michael G. Walsh, 5249 South Union avenue, on Oct. 17. Another brother, Matthew Breen, is being sought for the killing of Michael Regan, 9223 Houston avenue, on Jan. 1.

TIBET TO LET EXILED TASHI LAMA RETURN TO LHASA FROM CHINA

DARJEELING, Bengal, India, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The Tashi Lama, joint heir to the Buddhist inheritance in the mysterious mountain land of Tibet, is preparing to return next spring to his native land from China, according to the head of a Chinese mission reaching here today.

The Tashi Lama has been in exile in China since 1925, living in Nanking. Dr. Lin Tung-Hai has headed a mission from China which discussed with Tibetian authorities the lama's return to serve as a spiritual tutor when a new Dalai Lama is found. Contrary to a report last spring, Dr. Lin said, there has been no reincarnation of the recently deceased Dalai Lama, spiritual head of all Tibetians, who died a year ago.

According to Tibetian beliefs the soul of a departing lama enters the body of a new born babe of possibly obscure origin. Priests and followers of Buddhism have been conducting a search of the nation since the Dalai's death to find the infant, who is revealed to them by certain qualifications. The Tibetians are meanwhile satisfied with the leadership of the acting Dalai Lama, an unnamed youth of only 23 years.

Belgium Cuts Idle's Dole; Go to Work, Slackers Told

BRUSSELS, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The government issued a decree today cutting the 1935 dole for unemployed Belgians by 350,000,000 francs [about $23,100,000]. The government bluntly told the jobless that refusal to accept any work offered would mean no pay at all. All dole recipients will be checked daily. The dole, which in 1934 totaled 950,000,000 francs, was limited to 600,000,000 for next year, the state contributing 50 per cent and the provinces communes 25 per cent each.

REVEAL HORTHY PLAN TO BECOME HUNGARY'S KING

VIENNA, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary, according to today's Staatswehr, Austrian legitimist organ, is planning to become Hungary's king in name as well as in fact.

Premier Julius Goemboes, Horthy's chief of staf in the march on Budapest, and now his premier, favors the election of a king, instead of the enthronement of Archduke Otto, the newspaper declares.

Horthy has two sons by a wife who was once one of the most beautiful women in Hungary. She now is a regal figure with snow white hair.

The Staatswehr said the Archduke Josef, who is known as the Hungarian Hapsburg, is scheming to gain the throne. Both the regent and the archduke were severely criticized for failure to attend services marking Otto's recent birthday although they attended a memorial mass for the late Emperor Franz Josef.

FLOOD OF TIBER DRIVES 1,000 FROM HOMES IN ROME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 17.—The Tiber river flood drove 1,000 Romans from their homes last night. Three houses caved in, but the residents were saved. The river's rampage has caused much property damage.

The ancient Milvio bridge north of the city has been closed to trafic. Many natives evacuated Fiumicino at the mouth of the Tiber. Towns in the upper valley were flooded.

The river stage at Rome was stationary at 47 feet this noon, the highest since 1929. It is believed the flood will now recede. The government has opened federal dormitories for the temporarily homeless and relief agencies are distributing rations.

BURGLARS LOOT HOME OF $983.

Burglars who broke through glass in the back door entered the home of Frank Gall, 2323 North Keating avenue, Sunday night and stole $983 in cash, furs and draperies, he reported to Cragin police yesterday.

REDS EXECUTE 28 MORE FOR TERROR; ARRESTS MOUNT

Death Toll Rises to 103 Since Kirov Slaying.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Dec. 18.—Twenty-eight of the thirty-seven whose arrests on charges of preparing to commit terroristic acts against soviet officials in the Ukraine were announced on Dec. 10 have been found guilty and shot.

This brings to 103 the number whose execution on this charge has been made public by soviet authorities since the assassination of Sergei Kirov on Dec. 1 in Leningrad. A total of 120 have been arrested as terrorists in this period, according to official statements.

Woman Escapes Death.

The new convictions and executions took place in Kiev, capital of Ukraine. The accused were haled before the circuit military tribunal of the supreme court of U. S. S. R. The brief announcement of the result late tonight said the sentences had already been carried out.

Nine, including Anna Ivanova Skripkozlovsky, the only woman among the thirty-seven, are held for further investigation. The announcement said the majority had crossed the soviet border from Poland and Rumania and most were armed with pistols and grenades. The executions have included thirty-seven at Leningrad, twenty-nine at Moscow, nine at Minsk, and twenty-eight at Kiev.

The first indication of the "class enemies" to whom the soviet authorities ascribe the inspiration of Kirov was disclosed today. The group accused are "left deviators" who followed Gregory Zinoviev in his opposition to Dictator Joseph Stalin's policies in 1926.

Blow at Soviet Power.

This indication was given today in almost identical resolutions of party organizations both at Leningrad and Moscow. Taking up the assassination of Kirov as a desperate effort to check triumphant soviet power by terrorism, they allude to the "base dastardly agents of class enemies, mean dregs of the former Zinoviev anti-party groups."

Zinoviev, who had been a political opponent of Leon Trotsky, joined forces with Trotsky in a bitter interparty struggle against Stalin. The controversy, the most bitter ever held within the Communist party, ended in 1927 with the expulsion of Trotsky, Zinoviev, and many of their followers. Trotsky was eventually banished. Zinoviev recanted and was readmitted to the party, though he never has had a prominent post since. The remnants of the group they once led have continued recalcitrant.

Ten Taken for Sabotage.

VOLOGDA, U. S. S. R., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Ten men were on trial today in a special session of the regional court on charges of sabotage in connection with the operation of a farm of the northern butter trust.

Mikhail Ivanovich Zenkoff and two other engineers were accused of deliberately poor construction of buildings of the water system. Nine of the accused are sons of czarist army officers, kulaks, or merchants, and are considered enemies of the working class.

The reptiles have invaded the police station, shops, houses, gardens, and streets. More than 500 brown, black, tiger, and copperhead snakes were killed in five days. Cats and dogs fight snakes in the streets. Two tiger snakes attacked persons leaving church.

Whippings Given Vagrant Boy Gangs of Canal Zone

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, Dec. 17.—A campaign to keep vagrant boys off the streets at night by whipping them started here last night when eighteen boys were picked up by the police and received six lashes each at police headquarters. The campaign was started after some boys snatched purses from tourists and invaded the settlement of American canal employés at New Cristobal.

SERBS' SPIES KEEP TAB ON NATIVES NEAR HUNGARY

Foreign Passports Are Checked Often.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUBOTICA, Jugo-Slavia, Dec. 17.—Surly Serb officials make a rude and rigorous examination of everyone reaching here from Hungary, whatever kind of passport he is carrying. Subotica, third city in size in Jugo-Slavia, swarms with uniformed men, police, agents, spies, and informers.

Everything is run like a garrison. Foreign passports are left openly exposed on the desks at hotels. Police come around every hour or so to have a look.

One feels the atmosphere of militarism and police spying. It is easy to comprehend how the police know every time a Hungarian domiciled in this district makes unfavorable remarks about the Jugo-Slavian government.

Agents Ride Trains.

On a railway journey from Subotica to Belgrade one is also subjected to police scrutiny. On one train ride of three hours a plain clothes man asked in English to have another look at my passport.

Hungarians who live in Voivodina district about Subotica usually have relatives on the Hungarian side of the frontier. Reports here have it that some Hungarians were expelled from Jugo-Slavia because letters they wrote to relatives fell into the hands of police.

Hungarian is spoken everywhere in Subotica, even by the chief police captain, Toscho Mjatow who admitted he was of Hungarian origin.

Surrounding Subotica the people are just as poor and look just as miserable as those about Szeged on the Hungarian side. The landscape is the same too.

Capt. Mjatow said he knew personally many Hungarians who were deported. He denied they had been harshly treated.

Refused Citizenship.

Capt. Mjatow said there were many who deliberately neglected to get their police papers in order. They refused to become Jugo-Slavia citizens. They wanted to live in Jugo-Slavia where conditions are better, but, at the same time keep their Hungarian citizenship. Only three men were expelled from Subotica, one a house owner, the other two owners of a few acres of land.

"I knew them and they were very nice Hungarians," the captain declared. "My men and the police of the district have each three months for the last two years informed people who were deported that they should set their papers in order, but it did no good.

"Therefore, no sudden decision was taken by all the police departments of the country to expel Hungarians last week. Those expelled from my territory had time to arrange their personal affairs. The three men I mentioned had time to sign documents authorizing a lawyer to sell their property or have it transferred to someone politically suitable to us."

Denies Troop Movements.

The captain said that from Subotica and the surrounding country 260 were expelled. Of these, about 100 were workers. Capt. Mjatow denied that the Subotica garrison had been strengthened or that there had been any troop movements.

"No one could stop the Hungarians if they marched across the frontier to Subotica. Two Hungarian regiments would be sufficient for the moment to overpower our frontier protective forces.

"Of course," he continued quickly, "we would soon drive them out for we do not propose to become a Hungarian colony here."

The police chief then observed:

"Here in Serbia we are democratic. We have had our land reform. Over there in Hungary they are feudalistic and backward and all their land is owned by a few landowners."

Students Condemn Hungary.

BELGRADE, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Jugo-Slav students demonstrated against Hungarians today, the 46th birthday anniversary of the slain King Alexander. Police were called out to disperse the demonstrators, who shouted: "Turn out the Hungarians."

It was officially verified that 28 Hungarians had been turned out of the country Saturday and Sunday. It was explained they had not been suddenly expelled, as so many Hungarians were recently, but had been given 15 days' notice. They departed without waiting for the expiration period, however.

Unofficially it was indicated all Hungarian citizens in Jugo-Slavia will be gradually eliminated within the next few months. Services in memory of the late king were held in all of the nation's churches. The boy king, Peter, with his mother and Prince Paul, the chief regent, attended together. More than 200,000 members of the patriotic Sokols organization spent the day fasting.

BRITAIN RECEIVES SECESSION PLEA OF W. AUSTRALIA

State's Petition Presented to Parliament.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A petition of Western Australia for secession from the commonwealth was presented to the House of Lords today by the Marquis of Aberdeen.

The petition, which consisted of a scroll 26 feet long enclosed in a highly polished box, also was presented to the House of Commons. The first consideration in this branch of parliament will be its examination by the petitions committee, no debate being allowed until this is completed.

Western Australia asked restoration of its former status as a separate and distinct self-governing colony within the British Empire. A recent plebiscite showed a 2 to 1 majority in favor of secession.

Demand Low Tarif.

The petition set forth that the combined effects of the Australian protective customs tarif and of free trade between the states of the commonwealth have inflicted grave injustice and severe hardship upon the people.

Western Australia wants a low tarif. Presentation of the petition to the king through parliament is largely a formality. The Australian government contends only its own parliament or the people as a whole can deal with secession.

The delegation which brought the petition had hoped to present it personally but this was impossible, since under the rules the city of London is the only body, which has the right to present petitions personally at the bar of commons.

Tasmania Ready to Join.

HOBART, Tasmania, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Dwyer Gray, state treasurer of Tasmania, warned today that the government might seriously consider joining Western Australia in seeking secession from the commonwealth unless relations with the federal government are altered.

In testimony before the commonwealth grants commission hearing of Tasmania's application for £1,000,000, [about $4,940,000] Gray warned that the state objected to the federal government's tarif policy, its navigation act, and what he termed the "humility" of proving property before securing financial assistance.

COMMONS COMES TO ABRUPT HALT; TINY 'T' GUMS UP GEARS

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Great Britain's huge legislative machine, the house of commons, came to an abrupt halt today, its gears gummed up by the tiny letter "T" where there should have been an "N."

The legislators, in the midst of their first day of debate on unemployment assistance regulations, were sniping at each other and the government because the house had either to accept the draft of a bill as submitted without an amendment or reject it.

The keen-eyed laborite, Tom Smith, spotted the words "other that," where obviously "other than" was meant. Opposition members stoutly resisted the government's contention that it was a clerical error. Stanley Baldwin, acting as prime minister, finally acceded to adjournment and promised to bring in a clean copy tomorrow.

Gen. Schoepflin, German Soldier of Two Wars, Dies

BADEN BADEN, Germany, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Albert Schoepflin, German infantry general who participated in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, and in the world war as a reserve corps leader, died today after a long illness. He was 81 years old.

GEN. F. R. McCOY WILL COMMAND 6TH CORPS HERE

Noted as Army's Diplomat in Three Continents.

Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, youngest major general in the United States army, was ordered by the war department yesterday to take command of the 6th corps area, with headquarters in Chicago's new post office building. Gen. McCoy, known for his services in diplomacy, is now at Omaha as commanding general of the 7th corps area. In the Chicago post, he succeeds Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, who resigned recently.

Gen. McCoy saw active service in the Mexican campaign in 1915, and commanded the 63d infantry brigade of the 32d division in France during the world war, winning a silver star combat medal. Nevertheless, it was as a diplomat that he gained his chief recognition. He represented the United States government in tense situations in Nicaragua, and served as a member of commissions sent to Manchuria and to South American countries.

Long on Mexican Border.

Gen. McCoy was appointed to the military academy from Pennsylvania, his native state, in 1893. He became a second lieutenant of cavalry in 1897, and a captain in 1903. For a time he was aid to President Theodore Roosevelt, then went to the Mexican border in 1912.

Three years later he was still on the border. In March, 1917, he became a major of infantry and went to France with a regular army division. He came out of the war a temporary colonel but on Dec. 4, 1922 he became a bridagier general.

On Jan. 27, 1924, while serving as aid to Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood, he married Miss Frances Field Judson of New York, a niece of his superior officer. The wedding took place in Manila.

In Chaco Difficulty of 1929.

In 1928, Gen. McCoy received the first of his diplomatic commissions. He was sent to Nicaragua by President Coolidge to supervise presidential elections. His work was highly praised by his superior officers and by Nicaraguan officials.

He became in 1929 a member of the American section to the Pan-American conciliation commission which settled for the time a dispute which had arisen between Bolivia and Paraguay over the Chaco region.

In 1929, President Hoover appointed Gen. McCoy a major general.

Gen. McCoy was asked to become a member of the league of nations commission to investigate Japanese occupation of Manchuria in January, 1932. After this service, he returned to duty in the United States.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Dec. 17.—(AP)—One hundred Turkish women were injured today, 15 seriously, when the floor gave way in a hotel at Moudania during a wedding celebration, dropping them about 30 feet. The bride was among the 15 who had to be taken to a hospital.

TWO WOMEN FACING GALLOWS IN ENGLAND; ONE DENIED REPRIEVE

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Only a week from Christmas eve, two women were facing the gallows in English prison cells tonight, one of them already denied a reprieve.

Mrs. Ethel Lillie Major, 42, is to be hanged at dawn Wednesday at Hull. The home secretary's office denied her reprieve application today. She was convicted of poisoning her husband.

A London court dismissed the appeal of Frederick Rushworth and Lydia Binks, both sentenced to death for the murder of a child who was buried alive at York.

It has been eight years since a woman was executed in England.

BUSINESS CHIEFS SUBMIT PLAN FOR REVISION OF NRA

List of Recommendations Sent to Washington.

Plans for revision of the NRA drafted by Chicago business men were sent to the administration at Washington yesterday by the Chicago Association of Commerce. The series of recommendations were drawn up by a special committee and the executive committee of the association after a study of results of a canvass of leaders in various trade divisions of the association.

Protection of small industries and for minority groups of employés is urged. Another recommendation emphasizes the need for withdrawing NRA control from intrastate commerce, and the necessity for permitting individual industries to draw up their own codes.

Suggest New Commission.

The changes recommended in the plan would be made by a new commission empowered to apply its powers "broadly." Industries would have the power to enforce the modified codes through orders similar to those issued by the federal trade commission. Two-thirds of the members of an industry group, both in number of units and volume of production, would have to approve the codes before they could become effective under the plan.

Other recommendations contained in the revision plan are:

1. There should not be a "forced return" to uncontroled competition resulting from strict enforcement of the Sherman and other anti-trust laws.

2. Codes now applying should be temporarily continued in force, but the proposed review and modifications should take place within a short time.

Provide for Arbitration.

3. Wage and hour privisions, and those covering child labor and other working conditions, should result from agreements or arbitrations between employers and employés, and be subject to approval of the proposed commission.

4. Enforcement should be by orders of the commission, having the effect of injunction but without criminal penalties except for the violation of such orders.

5. Provision to terminate codes at the instance of the affected industry or the conclusion of the commission at any time it is found that any code operates against public interest.

Oppose Price Fixing.

6. No system of price fixing should be authorized by the codes, but "reasonable regulation designed to prevent harmful price competition should be permitted."

7. Legislation should provide that the anti-trust act should not apply to coöperation by members of an industry consistent with the provisions of a duly approved code."

Officers of the association stated that the recommendations were prepared for the purpose of indicating to the coming congress and Washington authorities generally those principles which should be kept in mind when substitute code legislation is considered.

CAUTIONS CHURCH ON CONTACT WITH BUSINESS WORLD

Either the church must disassociate itself from business practices or learn more about them to distinguish the good from the evil, Prof. Arthur E. Holt of the Chicago Theological seminary stated yesterday at a meeting of the Chicago Congregational Ministers union at the Central Y. M. C. A.

"The Protestant church and capitalistic society came down the corridors of history together," said Prof. Holt. "There was a time when they had a decent relationship, but now business has gone secular and religions has gone pietistic. To understand the moral issues involved in the process of business, the church has established a research bureau. Because of their other duties, ministers are not able to do this work."

Prof. Holt, who is director of the Council for Social Action of the Congregational churches, discussed various phases of the relation between church and state. He pointed to the disbursement of federal relief funds by religious agencies, and referred to the world war when the "church was invaded by the state."

You Demand Fresh Milk DEMAND FRESH ASPIRIN

When you buy milk, you demand that it be fresh. Today science tells you it is just as all-important to demand that the aspirin you take is fresh.

Here's why. Read what the United States Pharmacopoeia says about aspirin: "In dry air it is stable, but in contact with moisture it gradually decomposes. Preserve in well-closed containers."

That's why each package of St. Joseph Aspirin is sealed in moisture-proof Cellophane to keep it fresh! And because it's fresh it gives you more effective relief from pain and colds.

PLANTS ON NORTH BRANCH OF RIVER URGE DREDGING

Barge Service Crippled, Council Is Told.

Manufacturers who have wharves along the north branch of the Chicago river between North and Belmont avenues have petitioned the city to dredge that section of the channel, declaring that lighterage barges are unable to get in to their docks.

The drouth and the silting of the river bed by storm sewers emptying into the north branch have reduced the channel depth to about three feet, the manufacturers have informed the council. They protest that they are taxed on the basis of dock frontage but are unable to derive any benefit from their wharves because of the shallowness of the channel.

Turn to Council for Aid.

From Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works, the manufacturers learned that the federal government about ten years ago discontinued maintaining a satisfactory depth north of North avenue because of a decline in the use of the channel. The sanitary district took the position that it was not obligated to maintain a depth other than that required for proper sewage disposal.

M. F. Kent, executive secretary of the North Branch Industrial association, then turned to the city authorities for aid. In a letter to the city council Mr. Kent requested that the city undertake to dredge the channel to eliminate the serious obstructions that now exist to commercial use of the river.

Committee Gets Resolution.

The city's interest in the navigability of the stream is being shown, according to the manufacturers, in the construction of a bascule bridge at Ashland avenue. If the city didn't intend to maintain a suitable channel, the manufacturers argue, a fixed bridge would have been constructed at much less cost than the movable span.

A resolution urging the committee on harbors, wharves and bridges to give consideration to the dredging project was sent to that committee by Alds. Joseph P. Rostenkowski [32d] and Z. H. Kadow [33d], both of whom were supporters of the bascule bridge. Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], committee chairman, said hearings would be held soon after Jan. 1. Estimates of the cost of dredging range upward from $100,000, for which there is now no provision in the city's 1935 budget.

SPEND $823,000 TO LIFT BAN ON 10 HIGH SCHOOLS

Increased Fund Provided to Raise Standards.

The board of education has increased its expenditures for the present term by $823,798 to assure that ten high schools suspended by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools will meet the association standards in a survey now under way.

Frank P. Sullivan, chief of the educational expenditure bureau, pointed out yesterday that this increase does not include a $230,726 boost in the school text book fund made before the association's report criticizing the schools was issued last April.

$17,000 for New Schools.

The increase is also in addition to $13,000,000 spent on five new high schools and $4,000,000 to be spent on four other new high schools in 1935, Mr. Sullivan said. The $17,230,726 total, however, can be applied toward meeting two North Central criticisms, overcrowding, and lack of text books, he pointed out.

Construction of the new buildings, and the expenditure of the $823,798 for educational improvements, should certainly qualify the schools for North Central association credits, William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, predicted.

Report Ready in April.

"We feel that we have done everything possible to meet the requirements," he said. "When the North Central action was taken the educational department asked the board to authorize the changes demanded, and funds were granted in every instance. We have had full coöperation of the board, and I am sure that when the present survey is completed and the report is in, we will have met every criticism in full."

The survey of the ten barred high schools now in progress is under the direction of A. W. Clevenger, University of Illinois high school visitor and representative of the North Central association. The report will be completed to go before the association in April, Mr. Clevenger said.

The ten schools barred from the North Central association last spring are Amundsen, Farragut, Foreman, Harper, Hirsch, Kelly, Kelvyn Park, Manley, Sullivan, and Von Steuben.

Holds Two Robbers with Gun Until Police Come

Francis Mulberry, 7404 Stewart avenue, was awakened last night by noises made by burglars. The noises came, he decided, from the basement. So he loaded his shotgun, opened a window that gave him an unobstructed field of fire against the outside cellar door, and waited. Two young men stepped out of the door, carrying clothing and other articles, to find themselves covered. Mr. Mulberry compelled them to stand with upraised hands until the police, summoned by a neighbor, arrived. The burglars are Harold Mannes, 26 years old, and Roland Forberg, 24 years old, both of 7601 Lowe avenue.

Ten Families Driven Out by Flat Building Fire

Ten families residing in a three story flat building at 3809-11 Sunnyside avenue fled to the street early today after fire attacked the rear part of the structure. The flats of Charles Lansman and James Sered, on the first and third floors, were damaged by the flames. The total was estimated at $5,000. The residents fled after they had been awakened by Irving Weiss, 3756 Agatite avenue, who discovered the fire.

Irving Weitzman's Trial Is Continued to Jan. 14

Trial of Irving Weitzman, wealthy south side baker, charged with the murder of Eli Daiches, was continued to Jan. 14 by Judge Walter P. Steffen of the Criminal court yesterday. Neither Mrs. Belle Daiches, widow of the murdered advertising executive, nor Mrs. Lillian O'Shea, a witness in the case, was in court. Mrs. O'Shea reported to police Saturday that she had received a letter threatening death if she testified.

Sculptor Knows His Horses, Jury Decides; He Gets $500

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A jury of six business men in the Municipal court of Judge Jay A. Schiller yesterday returned a verdict favoring the sculptor, Boris Lovet-Lorski of New York and Hollywood, in his suit against Martin C. Schwab, wealthy consulting engineer and art connoisseur who resides at the Ambassador East hotel.

Lorski was awarded $500 of the $1,000 he alleged Schwab still owed him for a pair of bronze horses which he executed and sold to the connoisseur in 1931.

Schwab in a cross-suit had asked that he be refunded the $500 which he already had paid Lorski for the horses and $1,500 which he had previously paid the sculptor for a marble head. The head, called "The Ideal God," Schwab bought in 1927. After the purchase of the horses, he said, he had found the head to be chipped and marked by several holes. The horses also were "plugged" and of faulty casting, he maintained.

Schwab Asks a New Trial.

Schwab's attorneys, G. Gale Gilbert Jr. and Harold M. Keele, made a motion for a new trial. Arguments will be heard on Friday. If a new trial is not granted the attorneys will appeal, they said. Schwab declared later that "it was not the money but the principle of the thing" which he cared about.

Schwab was the last to leave the courtroom. His tall, thin figure stooped a little from the weight of "The Ideal God," which he carried in a bag under one arm. Lorski was absent. He is on his way to Paris to execute a commission, according to his attorney, Bernard H. Sachar.

Members of the jury explained the verdict later. They said that, aside from what was art and what was esthetic value, the evidence was that Lorski told Schwab he would recast the bronze horses when the defects were discovered and that Schwab did not return them for a recasting.

Jury Looks at the Record.

As for the marble head, the jury, which had eyed the head asked almost to a man as it lay on the counsel table before their eyes, declared that Schwab had kept it for seven years before deciding he did not like it.

Witnesses for the sculptor, chief of whom was Dudley Crafts Watson, Art institute and radio lecturer, testified during the trial that the artists's conception and his reputation are what determine the value of a work of art.

Schwab's witnesses pointed to a hole in the upper lip of "The Ideal God" as a "fatal defect," and declared moreover that its worth was depreciated vastly by the making of an identical head which was sold to a Michigan avenue beauty shop.

A Hole in "The Ideal God."

While Mr. Watson was on the witness stand yesterday for cross-examination Attorney Keele, trying to get an admission that the hole in the lip was of importance, strode up to the counsel table. His Phi Beta Kappa key quivering over his expanse of dark blue vest, he seized the marble head in his arms, pressed it against his bosom, and looked down raptly into its heavy lidded, expressionless countenance.

"You see this chipped place in the lip, don't you?" he asked the witness.

Mr. Watson, impeccably attired in spats and dark blue, ran his fingers through his short gray hair. His color mounted and the black ribbon on his pince-nez fluttered in his emotion.

The Hermes of Praxiteles.

"There are also holes in the Hermes of Praxiteles," he replied. "I've put my fingers in them."

ATTORNEY KEELE—But it had been buried for a long time, hadn't it? [With a modest smile of pride at the jury.] Now, Praxiteles——

MR. WATSON [icily]—The name is Prax-it-e-les, my dear sir, not Prax-it-é-les.

ATTORNEY KEELE—Thanks. I'm only a lawyer. I'm glad to know. I'm sure the jury is, too. Just let me call it Prax-it-é-les, though.

To counteract Mr. Watson the defense put several art experts on the stand. Among these was Benjamin K. Smith of Winnetka, an art appraiser, a thin, distinguished looking man wearing pince-nez without a ribbon. He said he thought the marble head's pitted lip "a fatal defect."

Not a Horseman's Horses.

Carper G. Grimm, 1443 North Dearborn street, was a snappier type of art authority. He classified himself as architect, designer and decorator, and said he had attended Oxford university. Pince-nez, spats, a natty double breasted suit and a cameo ring lent Mr. Grimm an appearance far from academic.

Asked by Attorney Keele whether the horses were worth $1,500, he asserted that the casting was defective, and added: "You couldn't sell them to a horseman, anyway. He wouldn't consider that conception of a horse."

In an intermission a reporter asked Mr. Schwab to let him see "the woman's" head.

"It isn't a woman, it's a man," he exclaimed. "It's modern—that's what gives it that impersonal appearance."

Sanitary Board to Hold Hearing on 1935 Budget

A public hearing on the Sanitary district's $6,930,000 tentative 1935 budget will be held in the board rooms at 910 South Michigan avenue at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Ross A. Woodhull, president of the Sanitary district board, said yesterday he believed there would be little change in the estimates presented to the district's finance committee two weeks ago, which were $292,572 under the 1934 appropriations.

A jury was completed yesterday in the trial of Lawrence Cozzi, 25 years old, for the murder of Rocco Pisano, county jail inmate, who died last October after eating arsenic laden sandwiches which Cozzi is charged with having left at the jail for delivery to another prisoner, who was the intended victim. The case is being tried in the Criminal court of Walter P. Steffen.

Assistant State's Attorney Richard Devine said he expects to prove that Cozzi brought the sandwiches to the jail as part of a plot to kill Harold Clifford, a state's witness in an impending assault case. Clifford, who was not hungry, ate sparingly and gave the remainder of the sandwiches to three cellmates, including Pisano. The other two inmates were ill, but recovered.

The case in which Clifford was involved was the trial of Joseph "Fat" Piranio and Charles Konowski for implication in the "ride" shooting last August of Constable John Griffin of Bellwood. They were convicted and sentenced to one year to life in prison. Piranio was said to have been Cozzi's friend.

Threaten Cashier to Open $2,100 Safe; Go with $200

Six robbers threatened death last night to George M. Doherty, cashier, if he did not open the Brinks Express company safe in the garage of the United Dairy company, 2067 Ogden avenue. Doherty pleaded in the face of shotguns and pistols that he could not open the safe, which contained $2,100. Finally convinced, the gang took $200 from a cash drawer, cursed, and departed in an automobile. Doherty lives at 5514 Quincy street.

THE VICTIMS OF THE TYRANNY LAW.

Six more prosecutions have been authorized under the state NRA act, the tyranny law recently jammed through the Illinois legislature.

The superheated orators of the New Deal always picture themselves as the protectors of the poor. A glance at the list of prosecutions actually undertaken shows how false, how hypocritical, this claim is.

The victims are, almost all of them, obscure citizens operating small businesses with small capital for small profit. One of the victims operates an automobile agency at Pana. The offense of which he is accused is the shaving of his own small profit for the benefit of a customer. Another of the alleged offenders is a printer whose entire staf consists of 30 employés. He says he hasn't drawn a cent of salary for running his business and will have to close it if the prosecution succeeds. How many of his employés would then go on relief is a question which the NRA orators have not discussed.

The men dragged into court are all, like Mr. Perkins, the obscure battery manufacturer in Pennsylvania, little fellows engaged in little ventures in which all their capital is committed. They cannot by any stretch of the imagination be regarded as rich or powerful. For the most part, their few employés are content with their wages and working conditions. No one knows better than these employés how narrow a margin separates the venture from failure and how difficult it would be to obtain other employment if the venture failed.

As a matter of fact, no one who viewed the creation of NRA realistically could expect it to result in anything but the harrying of the obscure. The demand for the enactment of the law came neither from labor nor the independent business man, but from the spokesmen of big business which was finding it increasingly difficult to meet competition from the little fellow. The primary purpose of NRA was to prevent the little fellow from getting business away from the big fellow. In this effort big business found an ally in organized labor. In view of these origins, it is only natural that small business men and unorganized workmen are feeling the lash of the law. Theirs are the backs for which the lash was fashioned.

The Illinois legislature was bamboozled into enacting a state tyranny law to complement the federal law. The sooner it is repealed the better.

PASSENGER FARES.

To the reader who is only superficially interested in the proceeding through which the railways are seeking authority to advance their freight rates a student who will read the volumes of record must be a glutton for monotony and several other forms of mental punishment. Yet there is an occasional crum of reward. Recently one inquisitive shipper counsel varied the humdrum by inquiring of a railway official if experiments with reduced passenger fares in the south had been successful. On receipt of reply that both increased patronage and revenues had resulted he was emboldened to make further inquiries regarding similar experiments in western territory. There, too, railway passenger trafic is staging a comeback. The obvious intent of the cross-questioning was to bring to the attention of the interstate commerce commission the truism that reduced charges sometimes succeed in restoring financial health where increased prices are out of the question.

But we are not going to suggest that horizontal rate cuts should displace prospective advances. Constructive freight rate reduction is subject matter for another editorial. We are going to inquire, however, why the American public residing west of Chicago and south of the Ohio river is so different from the eastern brand that fare reductions in the former territories will produce dividends in patronage while in the latter territory it would be a catastrophic failure.

We have patiently appraised the reiterated statements of our powerful eastern trunk lines that "conditions are different" until they have ceased to impress us. Furthermore, we have not yet heard a satisfactory reason for continued refusal to try the successful experiment of the south and west in a stated eastern area and for a limited time. Failure to do so leaves the disagreeable impression that the roads prefer to develop aristocracy in transportation. In the meantime, contrary to the "public interest," as repeatedly mentioned in our transport law, they apparently intend to continue to harass competition with legislation designed to increase costs of airway and highway transport.

In other territories the Pullman surcharge is merely a memory recalled as having outlived for an exaggerated period its wartime origin. The standard of 3.6 cents per mile is reminiscent of twenty-five mile per hour automobiles, crystal radio sets, and mah jong. The world is going to travel more, faster, and cheaper, and the railways' share will be just what they can make of it.

THE PROBLEM OF MUNITIONS.

Japanese buying of scrap metal in the United States has made a brisk market. Some people think Japan may be intending to return it some day in metal with a different meaning of the word scrap. Again, its final destination, if such metal ever has a final destination, may be China. Metal scraps are munitions of war. An obsolete American ship purchased and taken to Japan to be scrapped might possibly in a different form be thrown at another American ship.

Senator Nye's committee does not care much to be told what it doesn't want to know, but the du Ponts took the liberty of saying that bales of cotton are munitions of war. A Texas farmer's daughter may be a munition maker's daughter. When a nation finds itself making war it finds itself in a highly complicated business, the embarrassments of which may be traced to a number of sources.

Natural resources may be insufficient and if its imports are stopped it is in a fix. It may not have the industries which can immediately produce military supplies. Even if it can buy abroad its hazards are increased. The north in the civil war had agents combing Europe for almost anything that could fire a shot and at any price. The home industries could not keep pace with an army expanding from nothing to a million. Some of the men were safer in front of an enemy muzzle than behind their own gun stocks.

American munition makers throughout a long history have had a very devil of a time and not the devilish time Mr. Nye wishes the country to think. The army ordnance department that is not a hidebound traditionalist is exceptional. Nearly every American improvement in weapons has been rejected time after time at home.

An almost continuous American policy has been never to have in time of peace what is needed in time of war, money possibly excepted. In later years the peaceable republic has provided itself with a fleet, but in many periods it has sat in a rowboat in its shirt tails. When it arms it is a warrior in a hurry, dashing off to the armorer's shop and hoping to find one open.

Sales abroad have helped maintain American plant equipment, but almost from the beginning such markets have offered their own peculiar political difficulties. In more than one country the way to sales had to be paved by subsidies or royalties or whatever the squeeze happened to be called. The Remingtons meeting such sales obstacles were led to diversify their production and add typewriters, sewing machines, etc., to their output.

The du Ponts extended their works until now in peace time the production of munitions can be regarded as an inconsiderable part of the firm's activities. Probably in such convertibility will be found a basis for the adjustment of what a country needs in peace time to what it will need only in war, an industrialism able to meet an emergency competently without having either idle plant in other periods or being compelled to stimulate sales which people are disposed to think in themselves malevolent.

GET YOUR MOTOR PLATES NOW.

It is pleasant to note the appearance of the 1935 motor plates on the highways. The effort to induce motorists to get their licenses early is bearing fruit. Citizens who are thus taking time by the forelock are showing good citizenship and we hope their example will forever dispose of the bad habit that has kept needed funds out of the state treasury and given an example of law evasion by governnient and people alike.

There was no justification for the habitual delay in taking out licenses. It represented slack citizenship and slack performance of duty by public authority. Its influence on the public morale was bad and its correction should help to bring about a more responsible attitude of motorists toward all laws and regulations of motor use.

Editorial of the Day

DEFINING A SPORTS AMATEUR.
[The Detroit News.]

A long felt want in sport is about to be supplied. Avery Brundage of the A. A. U. announces that a proposal for a uniform amateur rule in sports may be expected within a month. Mr. Brundage is a great optimist, for he is braving a no man's land where hundreds before him have become entangled in the barbed wire of controversial judgment.

It has been held that a Wisconsin football player who watered a rubber plant in a Y. M. C. A. for $1.50 a week was no longer eligible for Big Ten play, whereas in trapshooting a contestant may win hundreds of dollars in weekly prizes in the season and remain unsullied.

If a tennis player writes of a tournament in which he is taking part he violates the amateur rule pertaining to his game. A golfer may go considerably farther and keep within the pale.

A woman may make her living teaching field hocky to girls and remain an amateur, but a man, in any of several sports, may not run an athletic goods store and keep his standing. Of the American league ball players who have been barnstorming in the orient only one was paid—that being Ruth. A talented drawer of expense accounts might have picked up something good on this trip, which provided the professionals only lodging and transportation.

The original meaning of amateur—a lover—has long since ceased to apply in sport, and it is too much to expect that so simple a definition should. Yet at heart a Dizzy Dean or Bronko Nagurski, who would be tossing rocks at a stump or a football about a vacant lot if they were not in organized athletics, comes nearer to the amateur ideal than do scores of tired young business men who, technically, are simon pures.

WHAT A PAL.

The two travelers had wandered far from civilization and had fallen into the hands of a savage chief. The day following their capture the chief ordered them to go out and gather fruit. In due course the first returned bearing a plentiful supply of grapes.

"What do you bring?" asked the chief.

"Grapes," was the reply.

"Then swallow them whole."

A roar of laughter followed this order and the chief frowned.

"Why do you laugh?" he asked.

"Sorry," apologized the prisoner. "I was just thinking of my pal. He's bringing coconuts."

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

IS THERE ANYTHING more absolutely comfortable and cozy and delightful than sitting in front of a fireplace with the wood piled high and the red and blue flames leaping high, while outside a blizzard is roaring and the windows are frosted with ice? That is, it used to be lovely, but now, with wood costing twenty-two dollars and fifty cents a cord, I can't help thinking when a log bursts into flame, "Well, there goes fifteen cents." And then the bigger log above it takes fire and I sigh and say: "Twenty-three and a half cents going into ashes." With wood costing what it does a cheery fire in the fireplace only brings sorrow to the heart. And if I ever catch a cricket singing on the hearth while the fire that is warming him costs twenty-two and a half bucks a cord I'm going to give him a swift kick in the pants.

THREE SONNETS IN PRAISE OF BOOKS.

O crystal windows of the widening world,
O messengers of woe, criers of joy,
Victorious banners, mournful banners furled,
Siftings of gold and scrapings of alloy,
Songs of the broken heart and songs of peace,
The wind of cursing and the breath of prayer,
Hatred and love, the wasting and increase
Of human toil, the weight of human care,
Aye, and the silent towers of human thought
Where nothing is but Truth and that great calm
That holds the dreamer's dream, destiny-fraught,
As one should hold a jewel in the palm . . .
I bear you all, alive in every part,
A many-lighted city, in my heart.

Where shall I turn, and find an alien thing?
Where shall I go, and have not been before?
The desert knows me, and the eagle's wing
Sweeping above the curled waves on the shore
Has passed me where I stood; the fugitive
Has taken bread from me; I have drawn nigh
To dreadful places, where no light can live;
A cross set up against a darkened sky
Has cast its shadow on me; children's wails
Are hungry in my heart; the long delight
Of friendly loves and small delicious tales
Nods like a sunny garden in my sight;
O alchemy! so let the life I hold
Be turned at last to universal gold.

O spend and die, that they may live and spend
A sweeter spending, who are yet to be;
How many a buried heart has stood me friend,
How many a cleft seed sprung to life in me!
Not the great sheaves that heap the golden fields
Are mine, nor stalks grown rich with heavy fruit;
I rest content with what my harvest yields,
A little springing from a little root,
And to the wealth high-piled from mightier seed
Bring in my meager gleanings; ask no more
What profited the burden of my need
Or who shall gather what increase I bore;
We live and perish that a child may stand
Holding God's secrets open in his hand.

OH, CERTAINLY! I think the repeal of the 18th amendment was a grand thing, but at the same time, doggone the luck, there's a rose to every thorn or people that live in stone houses shouldn't throw glass or some old adage that fits the present case. Repeal is a drawback so far as Christmas shopping is concerned. In the old days, after you had bought a lot of presents and started home and slipped on the ice, there was no damage done at all to the mink coat for the wee wifie, the slippers for Aunt Agatha, or the cowboy suit for Junior. But nowadays if you slide on the ice and hit the sidewalk your pretty presents break all to pieces. And the agony of it! The crash of two bottles of Scotch and three bottles of rye breaking into small bits on the hard, cold pavement is one of the most heart-rending sounds in nature.

A POOR BOY SINGS.

The little boy in the big church choir
Sings with the other boys;
But he is not as rich as they—
He has no comforts nor toys.
The little boy has a clear, sweet voice,
And though he sings apart,
The tune he sings finds its way to God
Out of his lips and heart.
And Jesus, who always has loved the poor,
And treasures all humble things,
Lets fall His blessing from heaven to earth
Upon the boy that sings.

GOING! GOING! No, not gone yet, but gosh! the supply of 1934 Linebooks that we started out with has dwindled down close to the vanishing point. And when they're gone they're mighty hard to get. Adelaide Love, the Line's w. k. poet, has hunted a year for a copy of the 1924 Linebook to make her Linebook collection complete. She finally got the 1924 book, but she had to pay five dollars for it. It's hard (especially after buying Glass Mitts, Limited) to realize how quickly these little ten cent books jump into the five dollar class. So get 'em while they still cost only a thin dime, ten cents, the tenth part of a dollar. It's a good investment.

TULAREMIA OR RABBIT FEVER.

WITH the approach of the hunting season valiant followers of the chase should have some knowledge of a serious type of infection that may be communicated to man chiefly through contact with the raw flesh of infected rabbits. The disease was discovered in 1910 by George W. McCoy of the United States public health service in the ground squirrels of Tulare county, Cal., and was later named tularemia after the place of its discovery. The infection has now spread to rabbits, chipmunks, woodchucks, gophers, and other rodents, and has been recognized in 45 states and the District of Columbia.

The causative organism was isolated by McCoy and C. W. Chapin in 1912 and is described as a bacillus that is rodlike in shape. It flourishes in the blood, the spleen, and the liver of infected animals.

Tularemia is spread from animal to animal [and occasionally from animal to man] through the bites of bloodsucking insects such as ticks, lice, fleas, deerflies, and horseflies.

The symptoms become manifest about three days after infection with headache, chilliness, vomiting, aching pains, and fever. At the site of infection, usually the hands, a sore is found that develops into an inflamed and painful ulcer. The lymph glands at the bend of the elbow and under the arm enlarge and become tender and painful. The acute illness lasts approximately three weeks, although normal strength is recovered only after two or three months.

The discovery of tularemia has cleared up many puzzling cases of illness that in the past have been incorrectly described as influenza or blood poisoning. Although nearly 4,000 human cases have been reported in the United States since 1924, yet the death rate is not high. Nevertheless many of those infected become extremely ill and some deaths have occurred.

Recognition of the disease is not difficult if the patient gives a history of skinning a rabbit, or preparing rabbit meat for the table. Positive diagnosis is based upon the power of the patient's blood to bring about a clumping of the specific bacilli in a laboratory culture. This procedure makes possible a clear distinction between this disease and typhoid or other infections.

No vaccine or serum has so far been developed that will prevent or cure the disease, and treatment consists of measures that will conserve the strength of the patient. Surgery may be required if the lymph glands suppurate and appear to be about to discharge through the skin.

Great care must be taken in dressing ulcers and discharging glands, as the pus can convey the infection. Occasionally the eyes are rubbed by contaminated fingers, causing a severe irritation and later ulcer formation. Very few of us have perfectly normal skin on our fingers, and hangnails are a favorite site of the entrance of the bacteria. If one has had the disease and has recovered a second attack need not be feared, as immunity has been established.

Prevention lies in keeping the bare hands away from wild rabbits, and fairly heavy rubber gloves should be worn by marketmen, cooks, housewives, and all those whose duties require the handling of these animals.

There is no danger of contracting tularemia from eating rabbit meat if it is thoroughly cooked, even though the animal may have been infected. Perhaps we would prefer to follow the admonition laid down by Moses in Leviticus xi., 6: "and the hare . . . she is unclean unto you."

DANGEROUS SPORTS.

H. M. writes: There has been much discussion as to which male sports are injurious to health and mind. Little has been said about sports indulged in by the opposite sex. Is there any feminine sport that is particularly dangerous, as, for instance, football for men?

REPLY.

I know of no feminine sport that is comparable in danger to football. Perhaps automobile riding should be mentioned.

ENTITLED TO ADHESIONS.

H. H. H. writes: A friend has been told that she has adhesions of the bowels. She has a good deal of pain in the abdominal area and seems to be getting worse. She has had seven operations already—two for intestional obstruction, one for hernia, and four cesareans. She is 32 years old and is afraid of another operation.

REPLY.

After seven operations your friend is entitled to have adhesions. These are bands of peritoneum that may interfere with the contraction of the bowel. Sometimes adhesions, if severe, lead to bowel obstruction. We hesitate to advise another operation, but if adhesions are present there is no medical means of dissolving them.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

The old belief that an apple a day would keep the doctor away contains some truth, because apples are a very healthful food, but there are cases where apples have brought the doctor—rather than kept him away. Apples which come from stores may have millions of dangerous germs on them and unless washed may cause illness rather than health. Green apples are also a classic example of what an apple can do when unripe. There are many other health rules which must be observed in addition to eating apples if one is to have good health. It is not enough to depend on the apple—look what it did for Eve!

WISHFUL THINKING.

Cicero, Ill., Dec. 13.—Thinking on economics today seems to be entirely imaginative and wishful thinking.

What are thick headed labor and thicker headed capital doing to promote recovery? They say that they are conserving jobs and profits through the NRA. The NRA is defined as a form of economic planning and it creates what some call a stable condition of business and others call stagnation. It works very simply, merely limiting production, capital expansion, and competition. Why, the essence of the capitalistic system is production, capital expansion, and competition.

Consider the way things work out normally. One manufacturer of radios, for example, decides that if he is to retain his share of the profits in the radio business he must modernize his plant. He employs building labor and machinists, and when his modernization program is in effect he reduces his costs. His competitors naturally must also modernize their plants in order to compete. The effect of this is to reduce prices and thus increase production, raise the standard of living and maintain employment. Yet we encourage monopolies of capital and labor. Fair profits for capital, minimum wages for labor, and a stable relief population.

The depression, or the deflation, is the natural result of the scare given the capital market by the stock market crash of 1929 and the monopolies then prevalent. It is apparent that this deflation has now run its course. In fact, we have a form of prosperity. Why, then, should we deliberately limit the extent of the recovery?

PERMANENT AWNINGS.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—In your paper today two correspondents bring up the question of disposition of snow and ice on city sidewalks.

It appears to me that a very simple solution would be to have the building code amended to require the installation of permanent awnings of glass protected by substantial wire netting over the glass, the awnings to extend from the height of the first floor slanting to the curb line. This arrangement would not only keep snow and ice off of the sidewalks but would be a protection from rain.

GEORGE G. DUNLAP.

WE'LL ASK MacCARTIE.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Will some one kindly explain to me the logical sequence of events leading from the assassination of the Serbian king in France by a Croat with a Czechoslovak passport to Jugo-Slavia's threat to make war on Hungary? Also, in view of the well known facts that a Serb king seldom dies a natural death, and that the succession of each member of the present ruling dynasty of that Balkan kingdom has been preceded by murder, I am very much surprised at the great wave of emotionalism which is said to be stirring the subjects of the assassinated ruler. I regret to say that I fail to appreciate their ethical resentment felt toward the assassin and his deed as such, for, if my memory is correct, five or six years ago THE TRIBUNE reported that a memorial had been erected in Sarajevo by the Serbs to the Serbian murderer of the Austrian archduke in grateful remembrance and in glorification of his "proclamation of liberty." Is it possible that the Serbs should have two codes of ethics?

FOREIGN MANUFACTURES.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—I see where Senator Thomas D. Schall [Rep., Minn.] in a letter to President Roosevelt proposed a higher tarif on foreign imports to "return about six million persons to profitable employment in the U. S. A."

In my humble opinion, this is a timely suggestion. Never in my life have I seen so much foreign merchandise on shelves and counters of retail and wholesale merchants. It is surprising to see the conglomeration of Japanese novelties, toys, mechanical instruments, lead United States toy soldiers, ash trays, dolls, merchandise, etc., distributed all over the country—and our American factories are idle.

If the American public thinks for one minute that they are buying cheaper merchandise under a foreign label and profiting by it they are mistaken.

ISADORE BELL.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Will some one kindly enlighten me as to what has happened to Goliath Gump? I recall that he was born, but he has not appeared in the cartoon for such a long time that I was just wondering if Sidney Smith has sent him to Australia, or what?

JUST CURIOUS.

THE PAY OF CITY EMPLOYES.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—I would like to make a few statements regarding the complaints made by representatives of labor organizations whose members are on the city pay roll. The chief complaint made by these representatives at a meeting held before the finance committee was against the inequalities in the number of payless pay days of police and firemen and of other city workers.

Last year the firemen and police took a 52 day reduction, while other city employés were docked 78 days' pay.

Do these representatives realize that the firemen work on an average of 12 hours per day for 365 days a year and are deducted 52 days' pay without any time off at all. Other city employés work on an 8 hour per day scale and receive time off for each day's pay deducted.

In spite of these conditions the firemen voiced no complaint against Mayor Kelly's efficiency program.

Would these union representatives be willing to have their members work on an average of 12 hours per day for 365 days a year without any time off?

FIREMAN.

SANTA CLAUS AND THE POLICE.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—It has been the custom of the writer at Christmas time to give some small remembrance to certain patrolmen in appreciation of courtesies extended the public throughout the year.

I was surprised to learn that several of these patrolmen, who incidentally had been at these same posts for a number of years, had been transferred. I am not questioning the advisability of these transfers, but I do think they should not have taken place until after the first of the year, in all fairness to the patrolmen themselves.

DR. DAFOE HOME; 5 DIONNE GIRLS SMILE GREETING

Brings Load of Christmas Gifts from New York.

CALLANDER, Ont., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, back from New York with a load of Christmas presents for the Dionne quintuplets today visited the babies after an absence of two weeks and found them all "in good shape."

The genial doctor went straight to his little charges.

"Sure they know me," he said. "Look at them laughing and smiling. It's good to be back with them again."

The physician, who arrived home last night, was suffering from a slight cold and remained in bed for the first part of the day with the temperature 3 degrees below zero outside. "I guess I caught cold from talking too much," he remarked laughingly.

Three of the Dionne babies gained weight during the 24 hour period ending this morning. Their total weight is now 58 pounds 15½ ounces, Yvonne being the leader with 12 pounds 13½ ounces. The smallest is Marie, at 10 pounds 4 ounces.

Tourist Attraction.

Speaking at a rotary club luncheon at North Bay today, Dr. Dafoe predicted a huge influx of tourists and visitors to northern Ontario during the coming year.

"It will benefit not only Callander and North Bay, but Ontario and Canada," he said. "I think that while I was in the United States I was the unofficial ambassador from Canada. I found no difference between the people of the United States and Canada except that the former don't know much about the dominion. They know of Callander, but they think of it as being the north pole and that I ride around on dog sleds. I tried to educate them.

Dr. Dafoe, though he has brought 1,400 children into the world—has never had as happy a Yule season chore as that upon which he entered today. From New York and its gift crammed shops, Dr. Dafoe brought numerous bundles.

"Quintuplet" Dolls.

There were dolls and rattles, toy rabbits, dogs, teething rings, and a man on a flying trapeze. There were elephants and bonnets, a toy grand piano, bootees, and lots of sweaters to keep five tiny babies warm in the cold northern winter.

Dolls predominated: "Quintuplet dolls, five in a row, and "cuddly" dolls that are soft to hold; and there were dolls that say "mama" when you squeeze them—but none that say "doctor." Some dolls were as big as Yvonne. Others were so small that even Marie could hold them.

The arrival of Dr. Dafoe brought excitement to the hospital which for more than a month now has been surrounded by snow. The nurses, Louise de Kiriline and Yvonne Leroux, wanted to open the packages right away. Dr. Dafoe said no, and the boxes and bundles were taken to the attic to await Christmas eve.

Big Christmas Dinner.

The doctor arranged to talk Christmas day plans over with Mrs. Oliva Dionne, the 26 year old mother of the quintuplets. It has been determined that there will be a family party at the hospital Christmas day at which Dr. Dafoe and the nurses will join Mr. and Mrs. Dionne and the five older Dionne children at a turkey dinner.

On New Year's day, which the French Canadians observe with even greater delight than Christmas, there will be another celebration; and in between, on Dec. 28, there will be still another, for on that day the quintuplets will be seven months old.

Oliva Dionne, the 31 year old father who is the "forgotten man" of Callander's epochal natal event, has been looking about through the woods around his farm for a Christmas tree fit to grace the occasion.

Christmas dinner for the five heroines will only be the usual cereal and milk. The quintuplets in later years can see the big Christmas party of which they are the principals, for pictures are to be taken.

TWIN BABIES ARE BORN 3 DAYS APART; SECOND CHILD DIES IN 36 HRS.

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Twin babies were born three days and six hours apart to Mr. and Mrs. J. Pokornik. The second child died 36 hours after birth.

Dr. Charles E. Anderson, who attended at the birth of the second child, said today, "There is no doubt the second baby was ready for delivery at the time the first child was born and if a doctor had been called he would have detected it instantly."

The first child was a boy, the second a girl. Mrs. Pokornik, mother of twins born five years ago, and the baby boy are in excellent condition, Dr. Anderson reported.

RECORD MONDAY SHOPPING THRONG CROWDS STORES

Spirit of Gayety Guides Christmas Buying.

Shopping records of other years were shattered again yesterday as an unprecedented Monday crowd surged through the State street stores on the trail of Christmas bargains.

"It was a peach of a day," reported officials of the State Street council. "Christmas shopping was intensified in a way that has not been noticed for many years. The jam of shoppers wasn't quite up to Saturday's record crowd, but then we expected far smaller crowds than those that materialized, this being a Monday."

Gay Spirit Guides Crowd.

It may have been a Monday, but it was far from a blue Monday, for gayety and a spirit of Yuletide joviality were reflected on all sides and all faces. Sprigs of holly brightened fur collars, Christmas wrappings lightened the weight of heavy purchases, and the crowd, even though jostled at times to patience's stretching point, smiled.

"It's like this," explained one weary shopper as she sipped a cup of hot coffee, her bundles on the floor beside her. "People bump into you, but they don't mean to, so you can't get mad. I think they walk without looking because they're worried about how much shopping they've got to do in so little time."

Shoppers Show Ingenuity.

Many and varied were the ingenious devices employed by the shoppers to assist them with their bundles. Some carried large mesh shopping bags, some carried collapsible suitcases, but most ingenious of all was the method used by one young couple to transport their most precious bundles of all, a year old baby.

The baby was placed in a long, narrow box with high sides, mounted upon wheels. Its narrow width allowed it to be propelled rapidly through the densest crowds, and its high sides protected the child from the press of those crowds. The baby's face bore a constant smile and gurgled gayly at the passersby.

Wife Denies Misconduct, Charges Mate Beat Her

Answering her husband's divorce bill in the Superior court yesterday, Mrs. Ruth Maitland, 27 years old, 941 Glengyle avenue, admitted being friendly with the co-respondent, but denied any improper conduct with him. The "other man" named by John Maitland, 29 years old, an orchestra leader, is Edward Gilbert, 21, a musician. Mrs. Maitland in a cross bill accused her husband of beating her.

Theater Stars Entertain Hines Hospital Patients

Theatrical and opera notables entertained the patients at Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital in Maywood yesterday in a program sponsored by the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion. The performers included George M. Cohan, Eugenie Leontovich, Leo Kopp, Coe Glade, Myron Duncan, and Herbie Kay and his orchestra. Mrs. Edward Hines Sr. was a guest of honor.

2 GROUPS PLAN DRIVER LICENSE LAW CAMPAIGN

Club Women Hear Pleas for Legislation.

Legislation looking forward to a reduction in automobile accidents in Illinois through the enacting of driver's license and safety responsibility laws was given emphasis at two meetings yesterday. Bills to enact both pieces of legislation will be introduced at the January session of the legislature.

Meeting in the Hotel Sherman, the keep Chicago safe committee approved, on recommendation of the legislative committee one bill providing for licensing drivers and the other bill providing for enforced financial responsibility of all drivers. More than two hundred women, representing civic and social organizations throughout the city, met at the Palmer house to discuss safety measures and promise support for the contemplated legislation.

Blames Majority of Drivers.

The Palmer house group consisted of the members of the women's safety bureau, organized four months ago by Mrs. Willis M. Graham, and working in coöperation with the Chicago Motor club. Speakers at the meeting included Lieut. F. M. Kreml, director of the accident prevention bureau of Evanston, and J. S. Baker, representing the National Safety council.

More than 75 per cent of the trafic accidents, Mr. Baker told the club women, are the fault of the drivers. Practically all of the accidents from this source can be eliminated, he said.

"If roads were absolutely perfect all of the time," he said, "accidents would be reduced only 5 per cent. Machines are now, when they leave the factory, practically perfect. If they were kept perfect all of the time accidents would be reduced probably 10 per cent. Including weather, which is beyond our control, these factors account for about 25 per cent of the accidents. The remainder are the fault of the drivers."

No Attempt to Check Drivers.

While automobiles are checked and rechecked at the factory and put on the road in as near perfect a condition as possible, no attempt is made in Illinois, he said, to put drivers on the road in a responsible condition. A majority learn while driving. The new driver's license law has two aims—first, it will see that drivers are competent before they go on the road, and, second, it will see that drivers who become careless and incompetent lose the privilege to drive. Such a law in Illinois, Mr. Baker said, in five years' time would reduce accidents by 20 per cent.

The motor truck fleet of the John R. Thompson company, establishing a record of 228,000 miles of city driving during the last year without an accident, was cited for merit yesterday by the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corp., Ltd.

BRAZIL RELEASES FIVE FROM LEPER COLONY AS CURED

Reveal Treatment by Oil of Native Plant.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Five inmates of the lepers' hospital at Sao Christavao were sent home today by Dr. Fernando Terra, director, apparently completely cured. They will remain under observation.

It was announced the five were treated for three months by anointment with oil derived from an indigenous Brazilian plant, of which the exact nature remains undetermined.

Found by Accident.

Dr. Terra expressed great enthusiasm over the possibilities of the new treatment and planned to apply it to all inmates. There are thousands of lepers in South America.

The bacteriologist Carlos Chagas, until his death less than a month ago, watched the tests used with imported Chaulmoogra oil to which was added the oil of the Brazilian weed.

By accident during an industrial experiment, the chemist Jacyntho Moura cut his finger and plunged it into the oil. He observed the therapeutic effect and advised Terra and Chagas. Terra decided to experiment on five men and five women in different stages of leprosy and observed the progressive healing.

Helps Penetration.

Terra, in a statement, said: "Chaulmoogra oil for many years has been employed in the treatment of leprosy. However, the doses were insufficiently administered. The patient could not take high doses either externally or internally. Now the Brazilian vegetable discovery yields a pomade which facilitates the penetration of the chaulmoogra oil through the pores, thus enabling high doses and increasingly efficient treatment. The new treatment is best in cases not hopelessly advanced."

EXCURSION BOAT FLORIDA BRINGS $2,600 AT AUCTION

The excursion boat Florida was sold at auction yesterday for $2,600 to satisfy salary claims of members of its crew. The purchaser was G. F. Benedict, owner of concessions on the boat. The sale was ordered by the United States District court and was the second to be sold under the admiralty law here in thirty years.

Yesterday a dozen members of the crew, disappointed at the comparatively small amount the vessel brought, gathered in the boat and discussed plans of operating it next summer on a coöperative basis. Thirty employés are owed a total of $11,000 in back wages, they asserted.

The Florida has been moored in the river at Michigan avenue since members of the crew brought matters to a head last summer by refusing to take out excursion passengers until their claims had been paid.

SELLS GIRLS DRINKS; FINED.

For selling drinks to two girls, 16 years old, in his father's tavern at 1700 Hastings street, Dominick Tornabene, 17 years old, 1846 Washburn avenue, was fined $10 yesterday by Municipal Judge Lambert.

ARREST NEGRO MATE OF WHITE GIRL COMMUNIST

Herbert Newton, Negro communist and the husband of Jane Emery Newton, white, was arrested last night when he attempted to reënter the flat at 615 Oakwood boulevard from which he and his wife were recently evicted. The arrest was made by Policeman John Behan.

Newton is to be tried Wednesday on a charge of disturbing the peace. He violated an eviction order and, with the help of several men, put his furniture back in the house.

His wife, who was found guilty Saturday of violating the eviction order, was given a suspended sentence while being given psychopathic tests. She was formerly a student at the University of Michigan.

DAVE BARRY IS ARRAIGNED IN BANK PLOT CASE

Dave [Long Count] Barry, who is under indictment for a part in a plot to defraud a Chicago bank and a Springfield insurance company, surrendered yesterday and was arraigned before Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court. After pleading not guilty, Barry was ordered held in lieu of $45,000 bond, and the case was continued to Jan. 14.

Six other men have been indicted for the scheme, which aimed at extracting funds from the Amalgamated Trust and Savings bank, 111 West Jackson boulevard, and using them to purchase control of the Abraham Lincoln Life Insurance company of Springfield. The scheme blew up when Otto Van Derck, a clerk in the bank, confessed.

JANESVILLE HAS A CASH SURPLUS DUE TO ECONOMY

Total Tax Rate Only $20 on Thousand.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Janesville, Wis., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Municipal economies in its governmental structure, practiced for 12 years, have placed the city of Janesville in an enviable financial position with an $80,000 surplus and a flat $20 per thousand city, county and state property tax.

Janesville is a city of 21,628 population, the county seat of Rock county. It functions under a city management plan. Henry Traxler is city manager.

Janesville's real estate tax is more than $9 a thousand lower than the average levy in Wisconsin, and is about half the rate in many northern Wisconsin cities.

Share State Utilities Tax.

None of the local property tax levy is used for general city purposes, Manager Traxler explained. Cost of city government is paid by the city's share of state taxes on utilities and incomes.

The state, which collects the income tax, reapportions 50 per cent to the political subdivision from which it comes. Of the utilities tax, 65 per cent is returned to the source.

When the state distributes this money to localities from which it comes, Janesville's government holds its expenditures down to sums derived from this source, and even returns an annual surplus to its city treasury.

Only 7 Per Cent Unemployed.

Until today, 7 per cent of Janesville's populace was unemployed. While this percentage probably was about the lowest among large cities in Wisconsin, unemployment today was decreasing still further here. Within a week, only about 5 per cent of Janesville's citizens will be unemployed. This will be within 1 or 2 per cent of normal unemployment, according to Traxler.

The city manager estimated General Motors plants, the biggest single industry of Janesville, will increase their employment lists about 2,000 during the next two weeks. The low percentage of unemployment is a direct result of the method in which the city government is managed, Traxler said.

While the city has never practiced direct subsidy of industry, and has never erected buildings for private industrial interests or paid their taxes, the low property tax rate makes Janesville one of the most desirable cities in Wisconsin for economical industrial development, Traxler pointed out.

Tax Levy of $20 on Thousand.

Of the $20 per thousand tax levy for next year, 40 per cent is for the Rock county government, 38 per cent for school, 19 per cent for payment of school bonds, 3 per cent for a vocational school, and 3 per cent for the public library system. No item for general city government operation is included and the levy for state purposes is negligible.

Traxler pointed out that the total reached is 103 per cent. The city government decided to take 69 cents for each thousand dollars of city valuation from its surplus and appropriate it toward tax reduction.

The result is that the city surplus next year will pay $19,205 of the total real estate tax levy. During the last three years, the surplus has paid $400,000 of the city property tax.

Under statutory limitations Janesville could be bonded up to $1,500,000, but the debt is only $634,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Herrick, 909 George street, obeyed the stock advice and did their Christmas buying early. Last night they finished the last of the wrapping of the gifts and piled them neatly on the dining room table.

When the Herricks returned home the packages were missing. Not believing that Santa Claus had been in, Mr. Herrick called the police to announce that burglars had stolen Christmas gifts valued at $300.

News of The Tribune Experimental Farm

By Frank Ridgway

The Best Shade Trees.

December 17, 1934.

IN searching for the best kind of trees to plant around the farm home and other buildings and in the woodlots and pastures men at THE TRIBUNE Experimental farms sought the advice of C. E. Godshalk, superintendent of the Morton Arboretum, near Lisle, Ill.

Mr. Godshalk has been at the arboretum since it was first started in 1921 and has had the practical experience of supervising the handling of nearly 400,000 trees and shrubs planted on the Morton land. His technical and practical knowledge makes his advice particularly valuable on what trees to plant around farm homes or in the city in this region.

In selecting trees for home planting he takes into consideration the necessity of having a tree that will permit the growing of a good carpet of grass on the lawn beneath it. The American elm tops Mr. Godshalk's list of worthwhile and dependable trees. He says this tree often grows to a height of 70 or 80 feet in this region. It produces a graceful tree, adequate shade, and yet enough sunlight filters through to keep the grass green.

The thornless honey locust takes second place with Mr. Godshalk. He has one in his own yard and prizes it highly because it is a beautiful and serviceable tree. It does not have the undesirable thorns like the black locust. He recommends it for planting on other parts of the farm because it produces a bean valued highly as a hog feed. Black locust also produces beans and may be used in pastures, but it is disagreeable to some farmers because of its thorns. The black locust is good for poor marginal land, river bottoms, gravel pits, or along the edges of ditches. THE TRIBUNE'S farm at Yorkville began tests this year with the black locust.

Elms and thornless honey locusts are good trees because they will grow in poor soil, rich soil, or wet soil, according to experience at the arboretum. If allowed to grow naturally both trees produce graceful tops without the aid of the pruning knife. There are vase shaped elms that produce satisfactory tops without pruning. In fact, most elms will develop shapely tops without pruning.

Mr. Godshalk warns farmers to avoid the slippery elm. It has rather coarse, hairy branches, large hairy buds, and rough leaves like sand paper, while the desirable American elm has small buds, fine branches, and rather smooth leaves. He does not recommend the slippery elm because it frequently begins to deteriorate while it is young; often the branches begin to die when the trunk is about six inches in diameter.

The Morton Arboretum superintendent does not recommend maples for lawns because of their dense shade, which prevents grass from thriving under them. The roots are often near the surface. The red maple is the best, Mr. Godshalk thinks.

DENIS-MOUNIÉ

is "the Connoisseur's Cognac"

When King Edward VII wanted a Cognac for his personal table, he turned to the great French house of Denis-Mounié (who named it after him). When other European connoisseurs want the same thing, they too demand Denis-Mounié. And when you want a superlative Cognac, may we suggest that you too try Denis-Mounié? Gold Leaf is superb for everyday use; Edward VII is even older, finer. Imported, distributed, and safeguarded by McKesson. Ask for these Cognacs of connoisseurs!

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Compacts for Christmas gifts! Two, both executed in gold, are standouts in the season's vanity offerings.

Compacts are inevitable Christmas thoughts somehow, perhaps because their appeal has the sound basis of practicality. Every woman uses one—and would prefer having more than one. Nowadays they're as much a costume accessory as a dress clip or the bag one carries.

This year's compact offerings seem to be pretty much on the gold standard. Of the thousands we see in the shops two gold ones stand out, at any rate.

No. 1 is somewhat like a golden horseshoe, a luxurious looking affair of gilt, with modernistic design of black and red enamel. It's larger than most, and heavier, with three clever tricks up its sleeve. There is a generous compartment for loose powder, and two smaller sections for eye shadow and rouge that can be used for lips or cheeks. The puff is one of those feathery French ones that does such an admirable job of finishing off a makeup.

This is one of the most stunning and practical compacts of the year, and one you shouldn't fail to inspect if you're playing Santa to a fastidious woman.

No. 2 is a chastely simple vanity, also of gold, with austere trimming of ivory-like enamel blocked on its lower edges. There is a place for a monogram, too. Speaking of which reminds us that one store has a clever little stunt for personalizing all sorts of gifts. You can buy letters for an unbelievably small sum and have them put on anything. If, for example, you chose this compact and hadn't time to have it engraved you could add the charming personal touch for a very small outlay.

This dignified formal compact isn't nearly as expensive as its richness of appearance would lead you to suspect. It comes either single or double and in either case the powder is loose. The powder compartment simply can not leak, by the way.

You can see both of these compact offerings at several Chicago shops.

Opera Starts Campaign for Another Term

Pass Subscription Blanks to Patrons.

BY JUDITH CASS.

A DOZEN attractive young women distributing subscription blanks and pencils during the intermissions at the opera last night were a pleasant reminder that there will be another season next winter, probably. The number of signed blanks that the aforesaid young women obtain during this week will help greatly towards insuring that we have grand opera next year, of course, so all opera enthusiasts are hoping that the young girls will meet with great success.

Miss Barbara Eldridge has the task of captaining the girls who will be on hand at each performance this week not only to obtain subscriptions but to interest opera-goers in the final gala performance on Saturday of this week. Thirty-one boxes for that night already are sold and the committee in charge of it anticipates that there won't be any unoccupied seats for the performance. Reservations for the opera cabaret supper that will follow at the College Inn also are going very well, so the supper chairman, Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, reports, and most of the boxholders are planning supper parties to follow the gala program instead of dinners to precede it.

Last night during the intermissions of "Faust" Miss Eldridge and the following girls went up and down the aisles distributing the blanks: the Misses Virginia Ashcraft, Lucy Harrison, Betty Brawley, Marie Louise Gardner, Myrtle Lampert, Lillian Lampert, Ann Harmon, Virginia Wiley, Frances Weary, Marion Gordon, and Martha Borland. Mrs. Wade Fetzer Jr. is acting as Miss Eldridge's chief assistant during this busy week.

Expect Large House Tonight.

As a result of the stunning performance of "Tristan and Isolde" Saturday afternoon, tonight's repetition of that beautiful Wagnerian opera probably will be sung to a crowded house, and since "La Traviata," with Mason, Fairbank, Hackett, and Morelli, scheduled for tomorrow night, also is a favorite, tomorrow's audience undoubtedly will be a large one, too.

The Saturday matinées have been well attended all during the season and it is expected that the house will be sold out for the second performance of "Manon" at the last subscription performance of this season.

The Fairbank who is advertised for tomorrow night is Miss Janet, daughter of the Kellogg Fairbanks, who are entertaining at supper after the performance in their North State street residence for Mme. Edith Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Fairbank, by the way, are not having their customary New Year's day luncheon this year but they are inviting their friends to drop in for eggnog during the afternoon. Mme. Mason, who is popular socially in Chicago, plans to sail on Jan. 19 for Italy to join her husband, Giorgio Polacco, and their daughter, Graziella, at their home in Milan. Before she sails Mme. Mason will give concerts in several places, including New York.

Mrs. John G. Shedd Will Be 81 Today.

John Shedd Schweppe doesn't arrive for his Christmas vacation from St. Paul's until the end of the week, so he won't be here to wish his grandmother a happy birthday today, but Mrs. John G. Shedd's other three grandchildren are here to wish her many happy returns of the day and to attend the family dinner that will be held at her home, 1550 State parkway.

The handsome apartment also is the home of one of Mrs. Shedd's daughters, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, and her two children, Miss Mary and John Shedd Reed. The last named arrived from Hotchkiss Sunday.

Mrs. Shedd, who today is celebrating her eighty-first birthday, had a big party last year, but this year she is having a very quiet one with just her family with her. Her other daughter is Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, mother of Miss Jean Schweppe, who, with her cousin, Miss Reed, are among the most popular and attractive young women in society. Their naturalness and charming manners make them favorites with every one, young and old alike.

Invitations to several of the Christmas parties have been extended to Miss Alice Spaulding, daughter of Mr.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

THE inebriate story of the day concerns the gentleman—the word is used advisedly—who was a passenger on a southbound elevated train one day last week. He was one of three passengers in the train when a girl named Virginia Barrett entered. She walked toward the center of the car and as she approached a man passenger he lurched to his feet in front of her. Taking her by the elbow he said in a thick voice:

Politesse—Gourmet—Notes.

"Lady, may I offer you my seat?"

Miss Barrett thanked him and sat down and the man stood up, hanging for dear life to a strap all the way from the loop to the Jackson park station.

A REPORTER inquired of M. Andre L. Simon, the famous gourmet who is in town and who addressed the Chicago Stewards' association at the Blackstone hotel last evening, if he did not think people overate.

"Yes, they do," Mr. Simon said promptly. Then, with a beatific smile, he added, "And why not?"

* *

M. SIMON said he is describing some of the best dishes he has had on the American trip in the next issue of his Food and Wine Quarterly. The baby crabs he ate in Boston and the baked stuffed white fish he had Sunday evening at the buffet supper given by Ernest Byfield at the house on the roof of the Hotel Sherman will be included. Asked how many courses he thought a perfect meal should have, Mr. Simon said three. For luncheon, hors d'œuvres, a hot dish, and a salad and cheese. For dinner, soup or fish, a bird, roast meat, and fruit.

TUESDAY Notes from the Monday Cuff. You can buy the Dionne quintuplets in the doll department this year. . . . Nobody who can go to hear Mr. Stock conducting "Tristan and Isolde" tonight at the opera should miss it. Saturday's performance was divinely beautiful. . . . Wondering why Elsa did not get her white bridal gown soiled when she sank to the ground in "Lohengrin" on a stage over which knights in armor had trod in the preceding scene, I learned that for each scene a fresh floor covering is laid down. . . . Shepard Vogelgesang is back in town for a visit and was welcomed at a wild turkey dinner last night at the Louis Skidmores. . . . Tatiana Riabouchinska, the fleet footed Monte Carlo ballerina whom I remember best dancing the part of the street dancer in "Le Beau Danube," is the daughter of the banker to the late czar. She had so many admirers that in London the director general of the company put her in a taxi, drove her to Lloyd's, and took out a $10,000 insurance policy against her getting married. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Marx Obendorfer's collection of Christmas carols includes three Negro Christmas chants.

Globe Players Will Move to Own Theater

Find Drawbacks in Venture with Films.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The Globe Theater company of Shakespearean players will end its stay at McVicker's theater in conjunction with cinema bills tonight, but will not leave Chicago. On Christmas night the organization will reopen at the Studebaker theater on a schedule of two short versions of Shakespeare's plays every afternoon and two other every evening. The program for the first week will be "King Lear" [new] and "As You Like It," at night, and "The Taming of the Shrew" and Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus" in the afternoons.

The conduct of this engagement will differ at certain points from the policy that prevailed during the company's residence at A Century of Progress. The performances will begin at the regular theatrical hours of 2:30 and 8:30. Seats will be reserved. The ticket scale will be from 75 to 35 cents. Each performance, afternoon and evening, will consist of two plays, a comedy and a tragedy.

The version of "King Lear," never acted at A Century of Progress, will run for an hour and a half. Carl Benton Reid will have the title rôle, and the other principal characters will be cast as follows: Regan, Miss Jackson Perkins; Goneril, Irene Tedrow; Cordelia, Martha Ellen Scott or Elsie Dvorak; Edgar, John A. Willard.

"During our stay at McVicker's, as a stage show in a cinema house," says Thomas Wood Stevens, director of the company, "we learned that followers of the legitimate drama are not ready to adapt themselves to movie-going conditions. They cannot read their programs. They miss the social conditions that are traditional at the spoken drama. They cannot accustom themselves to the odd hours of performance, and they grow restless during the film exhibitions."

McVicker's will continue as a movie house.

The Showboat Dixiana has changed its bill to "The Little Outcast," an atrocity of the 1900s which was written by Hal Reid, father of Wallace Reid, star of the silent movies and tragic victim of the Hollywood code of conduct. Its hero is an intrepid newsboy who foils the villain at every turn—a rôle acted by Janet Logan as if she believed that the author was in earnest.

The company has a new "heavy" named Willard Kent, who follows the Desperate Desmond tradition faithfully but without the majestic diabolism of his predecessor. The company is now rehersing "Bertha, the Beautiful Sewing Machine Girl," and its schedule for the rest of the season includes such old school concoctions as "Human Hearts," "The James Boys in Missouri," "Brother Against Brother," "From Rags to Riches," and "Across the Pacific."

New Lingerie Items Offered Gift Shoppers

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The last week for lingerie gift buyers starts with some promising new arrivals and with the surprising news that woolly nightgowns have been sold so fast that all records have been broken. However, you can still have these cozy bedtime beauties in the pastel printed cotton flannels ingeniously displayed and sold in envelopes of cellophane.

Something else to keep the "trend" writers in spasms of research is the record breaking sales of black chiffon models, the filmy, lacy heartbreakers of sable hue that make some shoppers gasp and blush and the rest of us gals dig down in the sock for hidden lunch money in order that we may own at least a pair of the dark darlings. New numbers are made with lace ruffles around the hem, full picturesque sleeves gathered into tight cuffs and half the sleeves are of lace to match the deep yokes and high round collars. Others have lace trim with a T strap arrangement of sheer black down the back. Still others have chest ruffles of chiffon and back straps of turquoise blue ribbon, or puffed sleeves, lace trim and sash of cheery red velvet ribbon. Anyway, you see them; they are quite the most decorative things in all the collections if you are just mad and young enough to fancy black lingerie.

Pale pink sheers trimmed with cobweb black lace in the yoke section with three rows of very narrow black edging around the rippling hemline are a smart and delectable half and half combine, and a flesh sheer with tucked angel wings and baby blue grosgrain ribbon sash belt that flutters in two long ends down the center is something else to write the home folks about. Gleaming white satin lingerie, the slip, panties and matching nightgowns liberally frosted with fragile laces look a bit bridal, but no female in her right mind will send such a grand gift back. One very practical as well as pictorial set that ought to make the best gift lists is the white crêpe silk nightgown piped in scarlet and made in tailored fashion, with tiny sleeved short jackets to match. The high jacket neckline is gathered on a cord. This charming duet makes a slick outfit for midnight reading in bed.

Good Morning!

Jean Muir, who was so very desirable in "As the Earth Turns," makes a far less favorable impression in "Desirable." Or so it seemed to me.

She invests every moment, every bit of dialog that falls to her with a panting earnestness that becomes dreadfully wearing, and does most of her acting with her mouth.

You discover her as the 19 year old daughter of a beautiful, self-absorbed actress. The latter has gone to great pains, through the years, to keep the fact of her maternity a secret, and Lois has spent her life in fashionable boarding schools under a fictitious name.

Circumstances cause the girl to descend unexpectedly upon her mother's city apartment one evening when Helen is at the theater. AND to encounter mother's boy friend, who, arriving to keep a midnight tryst—his first, by the way, with Helen—comes upon that lady's long-legged offspring.

Stuart constitutes himself Lois' guardian, protects her from her parent's cattiness, advises her on every possible subject, finally rescues her from the haughty family of her fiancé—AND the fiancé—and—can you, I wonder, guess the rest?

Verree Teasdale and George Brent perform expertly. I have never liked Mr. Brent better. The story's no great shakes.

See you tomorrow.

Grudge Holder Displays Traits in Letters of His Handwriting

BY MURIEL STAFFORD.

Do you hold grudges? A noncommittal woman came to see me for analysis of her handwriting. She wrote as a specimen, "Forgiveness is a divine trait."

After studying the writing for a few minutes I was surprised at her choice of a quotation. "Undoubtedly it is divine," I commented, "but you don't forgive people easily. In fact, your resentment grows, once you are offended."

She said nothing, but before she left I asked her to tell me why she had chosen that particular quotation.

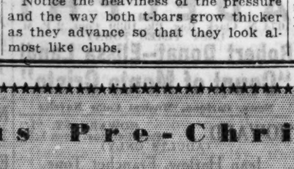
"I just received a letter from a former friend of mine, and that is what she wrote," confessed my visitor. "Although I want to forgive her, I can't seem to do it. I've been feeling this way about her for many years. I really wish I could stop."

People who hold grudges so relentlessly usually have an intense emotional nature. The handwriting will slant far to the right and it will be written darkly and rapidly. Being controlled by their emotions so completely, they are unable to reason themselves away from a resentment.

The t-bar is important in these handwritings. The bar will begin thin, but darken and thicken as it proceeds. It seldom flies above the stem, for this is not the quick, impulsive anger that breaks like a thunderbolt and is soon over.

The terminals never curl up graciously, but are inclined to be short and sometimes to curl in.

The writer of today's specimen has a violently emotional disposition and he is not broad-minded. If you ever offend some one who writes like this, don't expect him to "forgive and forget." He would make a cruel, relentless enemy.



Notice the heaviness of the pressure and the way both t-bars grow thicker as they advance so that they look almost like clubs.

RED STEFAN

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH.

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Enderby, an Englishman, is stealing out of Russia, where he is known as Stefan Ivanovitch, when he sees a woman standing on a bridge, evidently bent on freezing to death. He has seen her before in the town and admired her. She is Elizabeth Radin. He offers to take her home, but she tells him she has nowhere to go.

INSTALMENT II.

NEW FOUND HAPPINESS.

Stephen's heart gave a bound of angry excitement.

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say, Mr. Enderby——. I beg your pardon, Stefan Ivanovitch."

Stephen caught Elizabeth's wrist.

"What nonsense is this?" Then he had his coat off and was putting it round her. "Here—slip your arms into the sleeves. It's a beastly fuzzy old hide, but it will keep the wind out."

She had not known how cold she was till the warmth came round her. In these days, since Nicolas Radin's death, she had grown used to being cold. Life was one long nightmare. To freeze—to starve—perhaps to freeze to death. . . . The sheepskin, warmed by Stephen's vigorous body, gave her a momentary sense of awakening. In the days before the nightmare began one had been warm and cared for. A shudder ran over her as she said very faintly,

"You mustn't give me your coat. You'll freeze."

"Not if we walk," said Stephen firmly.

He fastened the coat as if he were dressing a child and, taking her by the elbow, began to walk her down the incline towards the left bank of the river. He talked as they went, and his blood raced. The coldest wind in the world could not have frozen him just then. He was alive, warm, and dominant. He felt capable of striding straight on to the frontier and over it with Elizabeth in his arms. He had never been so happy in his life.

"Now," he said, "you'd better tell me why you haven't got anywhere to go. Then we can think what's the best thing to do. By the way, what were you going to do?"

"Stay there, I suppose."

He could only just hear the words.

"And freeze?"

"I suppose so."

He felt a boiling anger which merged into triumph. Freeze, would she? Not with him to take care of her! He laughed out loud. She had again that sensation of awakening. In the nightmare no one laughed. They starved, fought, agonized, intrigued, and died, but they didn't laugh. Stephen was talking in that warm, confident voice.

He lifted her up and carried her into the house against which they stood.

"Please tell me why you've nowhere to go. I'm all in the dark, and I can't help you while I'm in the dark. Why are you stranded here? What has happened? I'll be able to help you much better if I know."

They had left the bridge and were following the darkening road. Elizabeth said, under her breath, "I don't think any one can help. I want to go home, but they won't let me go."

"You're English—you ought to be able to get away. Have you tried the proper people?"

"My husband was half Russian. He was a Russian subject. They say I've lost my British nationality. They won't let me go."

"Is your husband dead?"

"Yes," said Elizabeth. After a moment she went on: "He was an engineer. His father was Russian. He had the offer of a good job here. We were married and came out to take it up. It was all right at first. Then——" she hesitated—"things went wrong. Nicholas was accused of counter revolutionary activities. They shot him."

Even through the thick sheepskin fleece she could feel the warm, strong pressure of his hand. They had turned out of the main road into a side road

"What did you do?"

"I tried to get home, but they wouldn't let me go. They said I was a Russian subject. I don't know why they didn't shoot me, too—it would have saved a lot of trouble. At least—I do know why. The Commissar Petroff had an old mother, and he wanted some one to look after her. She was bed-ridden, and he couldn't get any one to stay with her, because of her tongue. He told me I might think myself very lucky to get the chance of establishing my revolutionary integrity. I hadn't any money, or any way of getting food, so I took the job."

"Well?" said Stephen.

Elizabeth shuddered.

"I can't talk about it. She was the most horrible old woman."

"Was?"

Elizabeth shuddered again.

"She died yesterday."

"And they turned you out?"

"No."

"Then——"

"The Commissar wished me to stay."

"You mean——"

"I thought I would rather freeze."

She felt that strong pressure on her arm again.

"O, you're not going to freeze. I've got a room—or to be quite accurate, a share of a room—and a share of my share is very much at your service. I won't offer to give it up to you, because I shouldn't like to leave you to fend for yourself amongst the other occupants. They're a queerish lot."

"Mr. Enderby——"

"Please!" said Stephen.

"No—I mustn't say it, I know. I won't again. But I can't let you run yourself into danger."

"Danger?" He laughed like a schoolboy. "That's rather like telling a duck not to get its feet wet!"

"Do you mean you are in danger already?"

"Already—and all the time."

"Then I shall make it worse for you."

"No, I don't think you will. It wouldn't make any difference if you did. But as a matter of fact you'll be rather an asset. Any one who was looking out for me wouldn't expect me to have a woman with me."

They turned to the left again and descended a narrow lane which ran down towards the river. It was now very nearly dark. The houses rose black on either side. The path was slippery with ice and trodden snow.

Elizabeth felt as if she were talking in a dream. Presently she would wake up and find herself on the bridge again with nowhere to go. Or perhaps this was the snow-sleep which has no awakening. Perhaps she would just slip down, and down, and down into uttermost depths of unconsciousness. . . . Perhaps. . . .

Stephen felt her stumble. He threw his arm about her.

"What is it?"

There was no answer. If he had not held her up, she would have slipped from him and fallen. He lifted her and carried her into the house against which they stood.

Elizabeth opened her eyes. She was lying on a heap of straw and some one was rubbing her feet. Her eyelids felt very heavy. Stephen must have taken off her shoes whilst she was unconscious. He was kneeling on the floor. As soon as he saw her eyes open he put a finger to his lips.

Elizabeth looked at him with wide, blank eyes. She was no longer unconscious, but she was not yet fully conscious. She had not really seen him in the dusk. Now she saw his face quite clearly, for there was a light somewhere in the room and it shone on him. She did not see his rough peasant's clothes or the great square hands which were rubbing her feet. She saw only his face with its strong chestnut beard and vigorously curling hair, and between these the bold curve of the nose, the bronzed wind-beaten skin, and the bluest eyes she had ever seen.

Some Parents Love Child Only in Babyhood

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

The little girl stopped at the settlement house on ther way home from school. She had her report card with her.

"My father'll kill me when he sees it," she told the social worker. "He'll just kill me."

"O, I don't think so," she was assured. "This card isn't so awfully bad."

"Well, he'll crack me over the head—he'll just kill me," reiterated the child.

"Now, see here," said the social worker. "As I came in just now your father was wheeling the baby, and when the baby cried he picked it up and petted it lovingly. I don't believe your father's going to 'kill' you."

The child looked up, not shaken at all by this disclaimer.

"O," she said, scornful of such naïveté, "you don't understand my father. My father's just crazy about babies—but he don't care a darn about kids." Only, being brought up in a hard school, she didn't say "darn."

This story was told by one of the speakers at a conference I attended not long ago—and it stayed in my mind because the little girl stated boldly and pithily a truth which I have observed myself in surroundings more gentle and favorable than hers.

There are fathers and some mothers who are like this. They dearly love a baby—its sweetness, its dependence, its unobtrusiveness as a person. They adore, too, the small son or daughter who looks up to them as to a deity, and whose ways are utterly captivating. There is a certain sort of appeal that makes the baby or the little child a sort of plaything. But when that baby grows older and more independent, develops a more marked personality, acquires positive traits, and becomes more complex to handle—when, in a word, he is no longer a docile plaything, but a person to be reckoned with—then some parents lose interest.

This subject will be continued tomorrow.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

NO-TRUMP REBIDS AFTER A TWO-BID.

I have explained that minimum responses in terms of no trumps are used by the responding hand as absolutely negative denial bids. He is, in fact, saying, "I am only bidding because I am not allowed to pass below the game level since you opened with a two-bid. Decide your own contract and do not expect me to bid again when you reach game." To this extent no-trump responses are more or less artificial, conventional. They are, however, fulfilling a natural function under the leeway principle, as they make it unnecessary for the opening bidder to jump to a game which he already had in his hand when he opened with a two-bid. Could we not call it a "sustaining bid?"

Let us now pass on to

No-Trump Rebids Made by the Opening Two-Bidder.

Here the situation is completely different. He has a versatile hand with not more than three losers in it; his hand contains a variety of resources and possibilities; his first suit automatically permits a natural rebid, consisting of not less than five cards; he must have more than one way of rebidding his hand. Consequently, if he deliberately does so in terms of no trumps, such rebid

Should Mean Exactly What It Says, namely, that he is not unwilling for the hand to be played in no trumps as every suit is protected. It is an informative, constructive rebid, more so than a mere rebid of his first suit. Let us first take the situations where you are signing off at game in no trumps. There are two: you, the opening bidder, may be declarer or else your partner may be the declarer in no trumps. I think I can explain this briefly by bidding some hands "thinking aloud."

Sp.—A K Q J x	Di.—K Q J
Ht.—A K	Cl.—K Q 10

I bid two spades. The response is two no trumps. Now I bid three spades. My partner now knows that I have no second suit which I can bid, asking for his preference. My hand is, therefore, of no-trump type. Though he may have nothing in his hand, yet I am now asking him to decide the declaration. If he bids three no trumps I will pass. If he bids four spades I know that he has at least three small spades and prefers the suit declaration for distributional reasons. If he should have an ace in his hand he should now bid that ace by bidding four of that suit. I can still sign off at four spades or four no trumps if need be, but that ace may be the key to a slam. I will know he is bidding an ace, though no fit in a trump suit has been found because, if he were bidding a biddable suit he would have done so on the first round. Nor will I read him for anything more than ace, as if he had an ace and a king he should have bid three no-trumps, not two, the first time. For these reasons, if his second bid is three no trumps, I give up and let him play the hand at that declaration. He has been able to make the final decision correctly, though he may not have a face card. Only under match point scoring would I insist on playing in spades for the honors.

Another Contingency.

Sp.—A K Q J x	Di.—A K x
Ht.—K Q J	Cl.—A x

I bid two spades; the response is three clubs. Now I bid three no trumps. This means that I am prepared to play the hand at that declaration because my partner has bid clubs. He can still bid four spades if he has three small ones and his hand is of uneven distribution, but he need not do so from fear. I have told him that his clubs are of service to me for no-trump play, though I do not fit that suit well enough to raise him in clubs. I have at least two clubs in my hand, otherwise I would never bid no trumps, but go on with spades, having no second suit to suggest. Knowing that clubs are not a total misfit, responder could next bid four clubs if his clubs were six in number headed by the king, or five as good as K Q J x x. In that case he can visualize a slam in clubs or no trumps provided I have three aces, as seem almost sure. If I have only two aces I will sign off at five clubs; with three aces I can myself bid six clubs over four. All these possibilities are revealed to my partner because I bid three no trumps instead of three spades [or a second suit], as my first rebid after learning that he had a biddable five card club suit.

'Faust' Starts Opera Season on Final Week

Announce Plans for Gala Closing Night.

"Faust," opera in four acts by Gounod, presented by the Chicago Grand Opera company at the Civic Opera house Monday, Dec. 17.

THE CAST.

Faust	Giuseppe Bentonelli
Méphistophélès	Ezio Pinza
Marguerite	Edith Mason
Valentine	Carlo Morelli
Siebel	Helen Ornstein
Wagner	Wilfred Engelman
Martha	Mari Barova

Conductor—Henry Weber.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

That the last week of the season has no depressing effect on the activities of the Chicago Opera was shown by two items last night. One was the first performance of "Faust." The other was the announcement of the burlesque to take place in the second half of the gala performance next Saturday. "Faust" was a first class performance. The burlesque looks as though it would be another.

In "Faust" there was a Marguerite in Miss Mason to sing as no one but she has sung it in this generation, with a lovely, suave quality of voice that decorated the brilliant part of the score and vitalized its lyric side. With her was Mr. Bentonelli, who seems to make light of rough air trips between New York and Chicago in order to keep an engagement, and sings all the better for them. He sang the cavatina with grace, style, and good voice, and he is one of the few in recent years to take its high note in the same quality of tone as in the rest of it.

Likewise you must look back some years before you find as satisfactory a quality of voice for Méphistophélès as is in the throat of Mr. Pinza—full, round, young, and unfailingly expressive. These three, plus Miss Barova, put over the concerted music of the garden scene as I have not heard it in a long time.

You will remember with pleasure many of the solos—Miss Mason's Jewel Song, Mr. Pinza's "Calf of Gold," Miss Ornstein's Flower Song, Mr. Morelli's "Avant Quitter," as well as Mr. Bentonelli's cavatina just mentioned. For "Faust" in at least nine-tenths of its effect depends upon fine, honest singing. Its drama can be taken for granted, at least in these days.

From the advance notes it is learned that Saturday night's burlesque will have a plot which is dependent upon a meeting of the operatic board. The business of the meeting is to engage artists who must be American, whereupon there is an audition in which Ruth Mills as a Russian immigrant sings "Dark Eyes," Lodovico Oliviero as an organ man sings "O Sole Mio," Margery Livingston as a Garbo type sings the "Swedish Echo Song." Bentonelli appears as a cow puncher and Morelli as a street cleaner.

American operas are discussed, among them "East Lynne," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," "Fan Dance," "Nude Descending the Staircase," and others. The first is chosen. Its performance is featured by the Ride of the Valkyries on bicycles, the Spinning quartet from "Martha" over sewing machines, the Jewel Song from "Faust" over a washing machine, and finally "Salome" in a cabaret. The plot of this last is too long to tell here. It is enough to say that at the end the soldiers, unable to find Salome, drag out the prompter and start killing him. He is saved by Santa Claus, who distributes subscriptions for next year's opera season.

Show American Fossils 50 Million Years Old

Fossils and reproductions of rhinoceroses living in North America up to the ice age are being displayed at the Ernest R. Graham hall at the Field Museum of Natural History, according to announcements yesterday. The animals roved the western plains as long as 50,000,000 years ago, according to Elmer S. Riggs, associate curator of paleontology at the museum. Their habitat included the area about the bad lands of the Dakotas, where the museum fossils were found.

Fashions Call for Attractive Shoulder Area

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

You usually can turn a good fashion note into a beauty lesson. The skirt length, say, into a lesson on slender ankles. A striking new dress shade into a lesson on makeup to go with it. And, what we want to talk about today, the strapless evening dress. The lesson? The nice shoulders to wear with it.

If you would break out in one of the Empress Eugenie strapless gowns, be sure you have the shoulders for it. They don't have to be too letter perfect, but they hadn't better expose defects that were better hidden.

However, any type of dress looks better with good shoulders, any type of suit, cloak, or gown. That area up there is where your figure carries the real youth or age signs. As a matter of fact, it has been said that you can tell other things about a woman by her shoulders.

Here's good exercise that will really do things for that upper area of yours. It will correct both shoulder back and shoulder front faults. Stand erect, hands down at sides. On count 1 move shoulders forward as far as possible. Count 2 raise them up as high as you can. On count 3 shove them back and on count 4 bring them down sharply and smartly to original position. You can do this anytime, anywhere, during the day. Do it often.

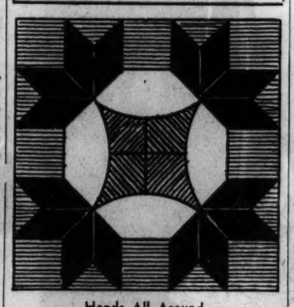
Quilt Takes Name from Call in an Old Barn Dance



Hands All Around.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Hands All Around," was created at the time when the old-time barn dances were at the height of their popularity. These dances originated in the nineteenth century, and the "caller" who directed the actions of the couples frequently voiced this signal. The colors of the original were as gay and festive as the pastime which gave inspiration for the name. Two shades of yellow, red, and white were used.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

Peanut Butter Basis of a New Brand of Fudge

Novel Recipes Add Zest to Holiday Candies.

"Candies That Are Fun to Make," a booklet containing twenty-eight candy recipes, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower, for 3 cents. By mail, 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

The swankiest indoor sport of the Christmas season this year promises to be candy making. Just why—who knows? Perhaps it's the aftermath of the years of lean-sided purses through which we've been passing.

But whatever it is, homemade candy is the cock o' the walk and the cleverest hostess is the one who can make hers the best and at the same time the most novel. The old standbys are bound to turn up. But we're adding to them this year a few new tricks to lend zest to the candy munching.

We'll take off with a chocolate-less fudge which gives credit to the peanut butter jar for its goodness.

PEANUT BUTTER FUDGE.

2 cups sugar
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons corn sirup
1 teaspoon vinegar
½ cup peanut butter

Combine the sugar, milk, sirup, and vinegar. Cook them to 236 degrees F., or until a soft ball forms when a little is tested in cold water. Remove from the heat, cool to lukewarm without stirring, then add the peanut butter and beat until smooth and creamy. Pour the candy into a buttered pan and when firm cut into squares.

BITTER SWEET NUT FUDGE.

¾ pound dipping chocolate
1 can sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-3 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped nuts

Melt the chocolate over hot water. Take from the heat and stir in the sweetened condensed milk. Add the salt, vanilla, and the nuts. Turn into a buttered pan and chill over night. Cut and serve.

FRUIT BRITTLE.

1 cup sugar
1-3 cup corn sirup
¼ cup water
1-3 cup peanuts or blanched almonds
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped dried fruit
½ teaspoon soda

Cook the sugar, sirup, and water together to 275 degrees F., or until a hard ball is formed when a little of the sirup is dropped into cold water. Add the nuts and heat until they become slightly brown. Remove from the fire and add the butter, dried fruit, and salt. Mix well, then add the soda, stirring it in quickly. Pour at once into a buttered pan to form thin sheets. Break into the desired sizes when cool.

ORANGE TAFFY.

2 cups sugar
¼ cup water
2-3 cup orange juice, strained
Pinch of salt

Boil together the sugar, water, orange juice, and salt until a hard ball will form in water [270 degrees F.]. Pour the sirup out onto buttered plates and when cool enough to handle pull with the finger tips until light and stiff. Stretch out the candy into long ropes and when cold break into pieces for serving.

Marriage Vs. Dependents Is Timely Dilemma

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Readers, I beg your help on the following problem. Such situations floor me completely. Face to face with the chance of marriage on the one hand and dependent parents on the other, it's easy for you and me to generalize, to say that the daughter has the right to a life of her own with the man she loves.

To state the case: the young woman is 24 years old, has been in love for four years, engaged a year. Only recently things began to brighten for her fiancé. But his new job necessitated his moving to another state from that in which the girl lives and in which he formerly lived himself. He wants the young woman to come now to this new town and marry him. It will be hard sledding for the pair of them on his present salary, but the girl is willing to take the chance, except for her dependent parent problem.

After successful years, the father's business collapsed completely during the depression. His years have been against him in the search for a job. The fiancé puts on pressure in every letter. The girl fears further delay and the distance between her and her fiancé now may lead to a breakup eventually.

In one form or another, this problem is repeated in any number of family circles today. What is the solution? The only way out that we can see is for the young woman, a college graduate, to marry, scuttle around in the new atmosphere, and see if she can't get work and extra money to help her parents out. Have you any suggestions, readers?

Rubber Bathing Suits Now Air Conditioned for Greater Comfort

Air conditioned bathing suits made their bow in a preview of styles in rubber bathing attire presented yesterday in the Medinah club.

According to the manufacturers, those who wear the new suits can leave their vulcanizing equipment at home with perfect safety.

"The porous feature of the new type of rubber," explained one official, "permits ventilation through the suits, in much the same manner as the skin breathes. Thus the hot feeling associated with the old style rubber suits is eliminated. The porous feature is not visible to the naked eye, however."

MARQUETTE QUINTET BEATS MAROONS, 33-23

HUEY WAITS IN VAIN FOR JONES TO SEEK PEACE

Kingfish Refuses to Offer Contract.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Capt. Lawrence [Biff] Jones, former football coach at West Point and for the last three years coach at Louisiana State university, is out of a job unless he backs down or unless Senator Huey P. Long backs down.

Students and faculty at the school are hoping that some way will be found to adjust the differences between Senator Long and the popular coach. But there seems to be little hope for such a solution following today's developments.

What is regarded as the official conversation, which is reported to have occurred between Senator Long and Capt. Jones between halves of the Oregon-L. S. U. game Saturday, follows:

Jones Muzzles Long.

Senator Long [to Coach Jones]—Can I talk to the team?

Coach Jones—No!

Senator Long—Who will stop me if I do?

Coach Jones [belligerently] — Well, you won't talk.

Senator Long—You'd better win this game.

Coach Jones—Well, if I don't, I guess I'm through.

Senator Long—Yes.

Coach Jones—Well, get this one. Win, lose or draw, I'm through.

Senator Long—O. K.

Exit Long.

Huey Waits to Be Asked.

Today Senator Long said: "I have not asked the war department to extend Capt. Jones' army assignment at L. S. U. another year. Jones is just a fair coach. I've seen better and I've seen worse. He hasn't asked me to let him remain at L. S. U. I'm as big a man as he is, and I want to be asked."

Coach Jones refused to comment, but one of his friends said that Jones had no intention of remaining as football coach at the university.

It is declared that both the alumni and the students believe that Capt. Jones is right in demanding that he have the running of the team on the field. It is pointed out that Senator Long was never a football player of any consequence and has only become a rabid fan since he decided that Louisiana State must beat Tulane at any cost.

Jones' Record Good.

Senator Long today said: "Why shouldn't I have something to say about running the team? It was through me that Capt. Jones was able to enlist so many students on his football squad and many of the men attracted to L. S. U. through my influence are the best men he had on his squad."

Capt. Jones has been the most successful football coach at Louisiana State university in the last decade. Until Jones took charge, the Tigers were in and outers. They rarely played a representative schedule that would give them a rating for the southern title. Their chief object was to beat Tulane. If they lost all other games and beat Tulane, their season was considered a success.

Gets Competent Assistants.

Jones changed things all around when he took charge. First he surrounded himself with a competent staf of assistants, including Burt Ingwersen, former coach at Iowa, and Emerson [Spike] Nelson, who was a star tackle at Iowa. Ben Enis, a holdover from the old régime, remained to coach the ends, and Joel Hunt of Texas A. & M. became Jones' assistant back field coach.

The first year the army captain had charge, L. S. U. lost two close games, one to Centenary and one to Rice. In 1933 the team went through the season without a defeat, although tied by Centenary, Vanderbilt, and Tulane.

This year L. S. U. went to the Saturday after Thanksgiving without a defeat, finally losing to Tulane, 13 to 12. This game broke a three year record for Jones. Up until then L. S. U. hadn't lost a game within the Southeastern conference. Following the Tulane defeat L. S. U. lost to Tennessee, but came back in the final game to whip Oregon, 14 to 13.

NO WORD IN CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Capt. Lawrence [Biff] Jones, coach of the Louisiana State university football team, who was reported to be considering resigning after a fight with Senator Huey [Kingfish] Long, has not asked for relief from duty at the southern institution, according to a statement from the adjutant general's department today.

Jones has two more years to serve at Louisiana State. He was assigned as professor of military science and tactics at the Baton Rouge school on Feb. 5, 1932. If he resigns as coach, however, he probably will remain as a military instructor.

Talking It Over

BY ARCH WARD.

[Copyright: 1934: By The Chicago Tribune.]

COACH BOB ZUPPKE of Illinois doesn't like to talk football. . . . He says the subject bores him. . . . But he made thirty speeches in his first ten days at Los Angeles. . . . The Cubs this year are going back to the meal money allotment plan for feeding their stalwarts instead of making the boys feed in the hotels where the team is billeted. . . . The club has not been on meal money since Rogers Hornsby became manager. . . .

ROGERS HORNSBY.

ED WALSH SR.

Hornsby made the change because he claimed tightwad ball players are wont to go undernourished 'n order to pinch down their victual allowance. . . . Ed Walsh Sr., in reminiscing recently on meal frugality, told of John Anderson, who regularly used to make the trip from Boston to St. Louis on a dozen bananas. . . . Incidentally, Anderson was the first major leaguer to steal second with the bases full and the boner still is called "a John Anderson." . . .

Since Nov. 24 Noble Kizer's attempts to discipline his son, Dick, age 5, invariably end with Dick muttering. "I'm glad Indiana beat ya." . . . While Alabama was a definite choice five days in advance to be selected by Stanford for the Rose Bowl game, if the team had dropped its final contest to Vanderbilt, Colgate would have been named. . . . Jack Dempsey is shopping for a National Professional league football team. . . . Trouble never comes single handed. . . . The wife of Howard Jones, Southern California football coach, has been seriously ill for weeks. . . . Not that it makes any difference, but we would like Bob Zuppke to know that he sat on the writer's hat for three hours at the Brown Derby in Hollywood the other night. . . . Navy made a clean sweep of its athletic series with the Army in 1934. . . . John Richards, Wisconsin's only eleven letter man and its football coach on two occasions, is a member of the metropolitan water commission of Los Angeles, head of a Los Angeles investment house with branches along the coast, and organizer of Los Angeles' first fire insurance company. . . . Sing Sing's Black Sheep made $5,000 on the football season and Harvard lost $30,000. . . . And they say honesty is the best policy. . . . George Pfann, former Cornell star, is an assistant in the attorney general's office. . . . Next to Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth probably is the richest player baseball has developed. . . . He is worth at least $350,000. . . . Penn State is dickering with Harry Stuhldreher, who has been coaching at Villa Nova since he was graduated from Notre Dame. . . . Upton Sinclair, who was defeated in the California gubernatorial election last month, is former Pasadena doubles champion in tennis. . . . Eight years ago he invaded the Long Beach Polytechnic High school courts, challenged the team, and beat every player in a one set match.

When Cotton Warburton, probably the most brilliant ball carrier coast football has produced, left the field for the last time in the Notre Dame game 60,000 spectators stood and cheered. . . . Players on the Notre Dame bench also rose and cheered Warburton as enthusiastically as the Trojan students. . . . On two previous occasions Warburton had whipped Notre Dame almost single handed, if that is possible in football. . . . Warburton does not intend to play pro football. . . . He will return to his job as a cutter in the Fox studio after his graduation in June. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—Walter Eckersall was chosen as an official of the Notre Dame-Stanford game and the Southern California-Missouri game. . . . Joe Cantillon was appointed assistant business manager of the White Sox by Charles Comiskey. . . . Knute Rockne had his team scrimmaging on an ice covered field in preparation for the Stanford game. . . . Eastern club owners of the American league thought that Ban Johnson would resign his post as president of the league.

In the Wake of the News

HANLEY'S RETIREMENT.

RETIREMENT of Richard E. [Dick] Hanley as football coach at Northwestern university was not precipitated by faculty dissatisfaction over Wildcat failure to win a greater number of gridiron contests in the last three seasons. President Scott made that point emphatic before final solution of the problem had been reached.

Usually such official assurances are hooye. The Wake credits them in this instance. Even those thinking a change desirable almost unanimously conceded Hanley was a great coach. Of course, there were a few murmurs from alumni, "Perhaps some one else might have done better with the same material." They were a minority. A greater number, perhaps, did not care for the double wing-back or so-called Warner system of attack. If so, criticism centered on the system rather than the coach.

What then caused the change? It was one of "those things" with ramifications too many for more than brief mention. In the first place Hanley was aggressive and forceful rather than tactful and easy going. Like Doc Spears of Wisconsin, if he had anything to say he said it. Naturally such personalities sooner or later arouse hostility.

When Hanley came from Haskell to Northwestern in the fall of 1927—his tenure of eight seasons, by the way, was far longer than that of any previous coach—his driving disposition caused some of his players to say: "Te isn't coaching Indians now." Complaints of like nature are not unfamiliar on college campuses.

Then there was the "family angle." Brother Lee played quarter back. As field general and signal caller, like Dick, a driver, he incurred ill will of several teammates. Charges of favoritism in playing him were hurled. The Wake canvassed other coaches at the time. Consensus was that Lee was a capable and efficient performer, earning the place on his merits. Bob Zuppke of Illinois was especially laudatory, saying, "I wish we had him."

Brother "Pat" was line coach and Brother "Mike" was in a minor capacity at one time, later going to Pennsylvania. While Brother "Pat" was line coach Wildcats had good lines. He was very popular with players and fans. Despite intense loyalty to his brother he felt impelled, after refusing other offers, to accept the position of head coach at Boston university last fall. Boston U. had its best season in a decade.

So despite Dick Hanley's undoubted sincerity in the matter, the slogan "Too much Hanley" had adherents. More disturbing, perhaps, was lack of loyalty on the part of some former pupils.

Hanley himself was dissatisfied with existing conditions. He felt he was not receiving full coöperation from all sources. This was in part true. A schism had started, not wide and dangerous, but likely to continue growing. Hanley was not willing to continue unless radical changes were made. He had much loyal faculty and alumni support, some obdurate opposition. So a man whose coaching ability, as such, was not under fire retired to clear up the situation for the best interests of all.

The Wake, in recent conversations, frankly told Hanley we thought he would be better off and Northwestern might be better off if the change took place at this time. Such variances of opinion as existed seldom become reconciled. He just as frankly agreed.

Thus The Wake wishes Dick Hanley, always good copy for newspaper men because so absorbed in his subject, success commensurate with his ability in whatever new position he elects to accept.

SEEK ARSON GANG IN $60,000 FIRE AT THORNCLIFFE

20 Horses Killed as Blaze Razes 3 Stables.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A band of organized arsonists was sought tonight by police following an incendiary fire which swept the stables at Thorncliffe race track today destroying three stables and burning to death 20 valuable race horses, with a loss of $60,000.

Today's disastrous fire came while police were investigating a blaze a week ago which leveled two unoccupied stables.

Neil McArthur, caretaker at the track, said the fire appeared to have been set in several places. A blaze first was discovered in two empty stables but while the firemen were busy there another stable a half-mile away was seen in flames.

Thinks Fire Was Set.

McArthur rushed to the second fire and attempted, with the aid of stable hands, to lead the terrified horses to safety. Several were driven out, but rushed back into the barn and were burned to death. Only one was led out and it was so badly burned it had to be destroyed.

"When I opened the doors of the stable," McArthur told police, "the place was full of fire and smoke and it looked as if it had been set in several places. I opened the doors of all stalls and tried to get the horses out but they were so terrified I couldn't do anything with them. A few went as far as the door, then turned around and ran back in."

$20,000 Horse Burns.

Most valuable of the horses lost was Ladder, owned by Frank Selke and valued at $20,000. He also owned or had a share in the other 19. Conn Smythe, manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hocky league, had an interest in one two year old filly while King Clancy, Charlie Conacher and Harold Cotton, Maple Leaf players, had interest in another.

LONG SHOT WINS, BUT NOBODY HAS $2 WIN TICKET

Charlestown, W. Va., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Long shots had handicappers and railbirds groggy today before the seven race Charlestown card was finished.

The prize upset was Sweep Vestal, E. N. Myer's maiden filly, which drove to victory in the first race without a bet on her to win. Had some lucky track follower put $2 on the filly's nose he would have collected $1,366. As it was, she paid $105.80 for $2 to holders of tickets on her to place and $7.60 to show. Since there were no win bets on Sweep Vestal, the mutuels paid first money of $6.80 on Tiny Miss, which finished second.

Another outsider was Doubtless, which paid $115.40 to win, $27 to place, and $16.20 to show, in the seven furlong, $300 fourth race for three year olds and up.

And these were not all the long shot winners. Holster returned $69 on a straight $2 ticket in the second race; Don Tasker was worth $25 to win the fifth race, and Post Brigade paid $16.60 to capture the sixth event.

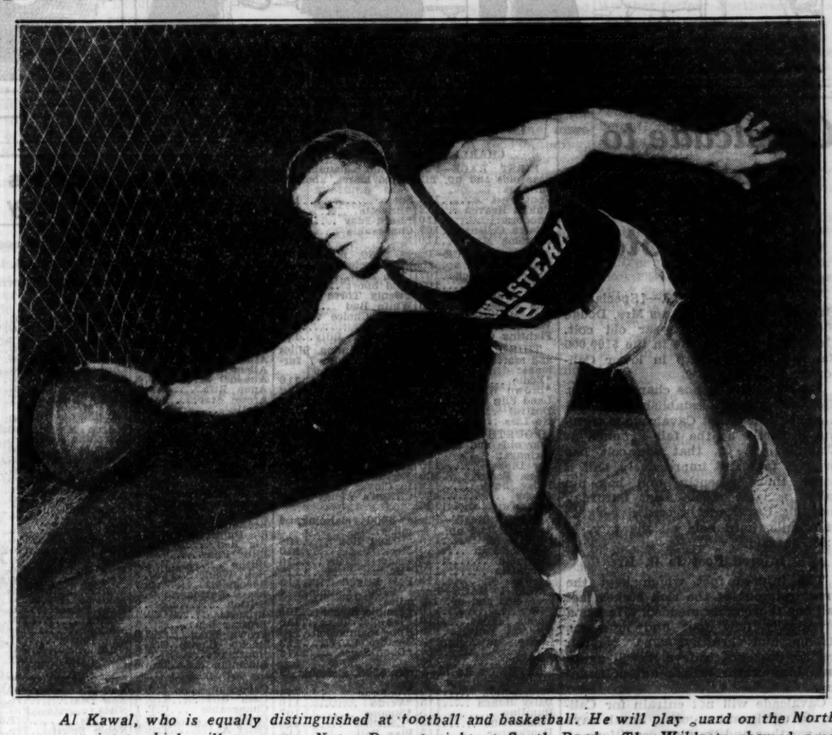
MAX SCHMELING, STEVE HAMAS TO BOX IN GERMANY

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Charlie Harvey, manager of Steve Hamas, New Jersey contender for the world's heavyweight boxing championship, announced tonight that he had signed a contract for Hamas to meet Max Schmeling of Germany in a 12 round bout in Hamburg on March 10.

Harvey's announcement followed two months' negotiations with Walter Rothenburg, German promoter. The contract calls for a flat guarantee of $25,000 and stipulates that Hamas does not fight between now and his engagement with the former world's champion. A special stadium with a seating capacity of more than 25,000 will be built in Hamburg, Harvey said.

The signing of Hamas to meet Schmeling in Hamburg cancels the winter plans of the Madison Square Garden corporation, which has been counting on staging the rematch for the former Penn State collegian and Schmeling in Miami next February.

THEY'RE VERSATILE FELLOWS IN ANY UNIFORM



Al Kawal, who is equally distinguished at football and basketball. He will play guard on the Northwestern quintet which will encounter Notre Dame tonight at South Bend. The Wildcats showed great power in running up a tremendous early lead against Pitt Friday and expect to do the same against the Irish. There is considerable history behind the Notre Dame-Northwestern rivalry, the teams having met 25 times. Notre Dame has won 17 and Northwestern 8.

Don Elser, one of the members of the Notre Dame football team, who returned from the west coast in time to strengthen the basketball squad for the game with Northwestern. Elser, who played full back on the football team, will be at guard tonight.

Notre Dame, Northwestern Play Tonight

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's hopes in its annual home basketball game with Northwestern tomorrow night will rest largely on the massive shoulders of Marty Peters and Don Elser, football players, who joined Coach George Keogan's basketball squad last Wednesday after returning from the concluding football game of the season with Southern California at Los Angeles.

Both saw action against Albion Saturday night. Both are 6 feet 3 inches tall and weigh more than 200 pounds.

"If we had another week to work on this new combination and to give Elser and Peters a chance to become acclimated," said Coach Keogan today, "we might have a chance against Northwestern, but our present combination can hardly be polished enough to cope with the Northwestern team we meet tomorrow."

Wildcats Show Power.

On the basis of the showing the Wildcats made in running 29 points in 10 minutes against Pittsburgh last Friday, Keogan said that tomorrow's guests are probably the strongest college players in the country.

Peters, who will play center, was a standout in the Catholic interscholastic tournament at Loyola three years ago when Captain of the Spalding institute team of Peoria. Elser, who probably will start at guard, is one of Notre Dame's greatest all around stars, being expert at the shot put as well as at football and basketball. The shift will send John De Mots, sophomore center, to the bench, as well as Joe O'Kane, junior forward.

Capt. Johnny Jordan, former Quigley prep star in Chicago, was moved to guard for the warm-up games with Albion and Kalamazoo, but will go back to his regular forward position if Elser is in the lineup. George Ireland, Madison, Wis., star who played in every game as a sophomore last year, will be at the other guard. Johnny Ford, of Indianapolis, will be Jordan's running mate at forward.

Expect 6,200 Spectators.

Since 1915 Notre Dame and Northwestern have met 25 times with 17 victories going to Notre Dame and eight to the Purple.

Only three of the last 13 games have been settled by a margin of more than four points. Notre Dame has won seven of these games against six for the Wildcats.

Report W. H. Britton Will Coach Tennessee

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—W. H. Britton, end coach of the University of Tennessee football team, will serve as head coach next season, according to published reports here today. Britton will succeed Maj. Bob Neyland, who was given a two year assignment in the Panama Canal Zone. Britton served as Maj. Neyland's assistant for the last nine years.

HILLTOP TEAM STEPS AWAY TO BIG EARLY LEAD

Kaplan Sets Pace for Chicago.

BY CHARLES NEVADA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Marquette's basketball team proved too strong for the University of Chicago here tonight, the Hilltoppers winning without much effort in a listlessly played game. The score was 33 to 23.

The Maroons, lacking height and without the services of Duvall and Lefevre, trailed except for several minutes early in the contest. Physical superiority and more accurate shooting gave the Marquette forces advantages. It was the Hilltoppers' fifth successive victory over the Midway quintet in three years. The teams will meet in a return engagement in Chicago on Jan. 5.

Kaplan Leads Maroons Scoring.

Al Ehrig, Charles Eirich and Ray Morstadt were leaders in the Marquette attack, which bogged down in the last half and clicked for only two field goals. The Hilltop trio collected 22 points. Sam Kaplan, who performed at guard and forward, paced the Maroons with two baskets and four free throws. Marquette was in front at the half, 25 to 13.

PURDUE, 37; WABASH, 25

Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The Purdue basketball team gave its best performance of the season here tonight to defeat Wabash, 37 to 25. It marked the third straight victory of the season for the Big Ten title defenders. Purdue will meet Butler at Indianapolis Saturday night in the first of a five game road schedule.

Wabash offered strong resistance in the first half, the score being 14 to 14 just before the rest period. Purdue put on a last minute spurt to take a 17 to 14 lead at the half.

Purdue's fast breaking game, with Shaver, Cottom, and White doing some neat passing finally broke down the Wabash defense in the second half and the Boilermakers pulled away to a comfortable lead. The Boilermaker attack was well balanced, every man on the starting quintet scoring two or more field goals.

Wabash Fouls Frequently.

Wabash fouled frequently in its efforts to halt the Boilermaker drive and Berns, center, left the game for personal fouls in the middle of the second half. Crisler followed him to the bench a few minutes before the end of the game.

While Wabash concentrated on stopping Norman Cottom and Ed Shaver, the Boilermaker co-captain, Bob Kessler, forward, tossed in three field goals and four free throws to take the high point honors of the evening.

BRITAIN'S RULERS SEE THEIR FIRST BOXING MATCH

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—King George and Queen Mary saw their first boxing match today.

It was part of the performance of the annual theater matinée for the benefit of King George's pension fund for actors. Jack Petersen, British empire heavyweight champion, went two rounds with Eddie Steele. Jimmy Scott and Bobby Johnston, bantamweights, boxed another round. Queen Mary peered through her lorgnette with interest and passed frequent comments to the king.

The headliner of the matinée was a revival of "The Winning Post," an old-time melodrama which had a long run at the turn of the century. The revival was produced by Seymour Hicks, the author, supported by 200 leading London players.

EQUIPOISE AND WHITNEY STABLE ARRIVE ON COAST

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Equipoise, handicap champion of the American turf, arrived at the Santa Anita race track from Lexington, Ky., today. The 6 year old campaigner will compete in two or three races in addition to the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, according to Trainer Jack Healey.

Equipoise will be retired after the big race, Healey said. Eleven other horses from the C. V. Whitney stable made the trip with Equipoise. They are Jabot, High Glee, Pundit, Rough Diamond, The Darb, Trumpery and four yearlings.

DUCK HUNTERS AT CLEAR LAKE FIND MANY MALLARDS

Shoot from Blind Atop 80 Foot Hill.

BY BOB BECKER.

Duck shooters who went into the Illinois river valley last week-end and returned with varying stories about the luck in outwitting the mallards. Some shooters saw plenty of birds in the air, but had few greenheads decoying. Others bagged their limits in short order.

Sitting in a blind atop a hill about 80 feet or more above Clear lake along the Illinois river last Saturday we saw one of the most beautiful flights of mallards we have looked at since the opening of the season. From sunrise on through the morning, flock after flock of birds rose from the ice on Clear lake, swept into the air and flew back to the fields. Literally hundreds of these birds passed right over our head. Many decoyed to our shooting spot to give us some great sport.

Just Sat and Watched.

As a matter of fact, there were times when we sat tight without firing a shot, while 100 or 200 birds hovered over the decoys.

We arrived at the blinds just at sun up in company with W. P. [Bill] Ronan, Chicago; his shooting partner, J. A. Donnelly, also of Chicago; Frank Mitchell, Peoria, and young Bill Ronan Jr., 11 years old, who was toting a .410 gauge. Cap, a friendly little springer spaniel, completed the party.

When Ronan said: "This is it," and pointed to the small frozen pond atop a wooded hill, one could hardly believe that mallards would show any great enthusiasm for this dry land shooting pond. This open place in the scrub oak woods is some seven miles from Manito.

Ducks Look Like Black Pebbles.

From our blind we could look down on the ice and see around 5,000 ducks sitting on their feet. They were about three-quarters of a mile from the shore and massed in three big bunches, appearing through rain and fog like tiny black pebbles on the ice. There wasn't a tea cup full of water in the artificial pond. Just a thin sheet of ice told where a little water had been earlier in the season.

One of the thrilling things about this location was the fact that you could stand in the blind, see a bunch of ducks take off, watch them make up their minds which way to go, and then follow their flight up the hill, sometimes right to our location. When the call "mark" was heard, down we went in the blinds to keep out of sight.

Ronan Doesn't Miss.

Ronan started the day with three cloud bursting shots on birds that swung past us and then circled above his blind, which was far up wind from the center of the pond. He got all three of the mallards, too.

From then on the parade kept coming. Between 10 and 12 o'clock, flock after flock either passed over us or decoyed to our set. All were mallards, including some black fellows. We could see a few pintails down on the lake, but they ignored us because the sprigs do not like these "dry pens."

WARDENS TAKE DUCKS

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—One hundred and fifty or more central Illinois duck hunters were stopped yesterday afternoon by four game wardens and a state highway patrolman west of Easton at tre junction of the Easton, Havana and Peoria roads, a gateway to the hunting places along the river, and their ducks were taken away from all who could not show kill slips.

Every shooting club is provided with a book of kill slips which the secretary is supposed to keep in duplicate. Departing hunters are required by the gme laws to have kill slips with them for the number of ducks they are carrying to show when and where they were shot.

Slips Not in Duplicate.

In some clubs the slips have been filled out but hunters have not troubled to take their duplicates with them. Those without them yesterday when the game wardens stopped them lost their ducks.

From 50 to 75 cars were held on the road for nearly three hours while the wardens went through the machines and seized, it is reported, from 300 to 400 ducks.

No Slips, No Ducks.

Kill slips are furnished only to clubs and owners of pens, but that made no difference to the wardens. They admitted they did not know how a hunter who shot on the river outside a preserve could supply himself with a kill slip. But if he did not have one he lost his ducks.

Fuller Named Chief Foe for Ross' Crown

Amber Wins in 1st

UTICA, N. Y. Dec. 17.—(AP)—Lou Amber, Herkimer, N. Y., lightweight, knocked out Mickey Paul, Pittsburgh junior welterweight, in 45 seconds of the first round of a scheduled eight round main event tonight.

The Illinois Boxing commision yesterday selected Sammy Fuller, stocky Boston, Mass., boxer, to replace Tony Canzoneri as leading challenger for Barney Ross' lightweight title. The action was contrary to that of the New York commission, with which the Illinois board had a working agreement. The New York board had ruled that Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., has displaced Canzoneri as No. 1 lightweight contender. Ross has been given until Jan. 10 by New York to sign for a scrap with Ambers.

Canzoneri has been shunted aside because of failure of his manager, Sam Goldman, to accept Joe Foley's bid for a proposed title bout at the Stadium Jan. 18 after Ross had accepted.

Canzoneri Ranked No. 2.

The state commission went a step further than New York when it named Canzoneri as No. 2 challenger, Cleto Locatelli No. 3 and Frank Klick No. 4. Chairman Joe Triner maintains Ambers does not fit in the picture at all after studying the eastern fighter's record which contained the results of his last 20 matches. He won 15, lost one and fought four draws. His most prominent accomplishments were victories over Johnny Jadick and Tony Herrera, but any glory in these was nullified by a loss to Steve Halaiko.

Commissioner Packey McFarland suggested Leo Rodak as a fit challenger, but was overruled by Chairman Triner and Commissioner George Getz, who held that Rodak had established himself as a contender for the featherweight crown and has not done anything as a lightweight to earn the honor.

Fear He Cannot Make Weight.

There were some critics yesterday who claimed Fuller cannot make the title poundage. Sammy weighed 139 pounds for his unsuccessful junior welterweight championship bout with Ross at the Stadium Nov. 17 of last year. He scaled 138 for his recent conquest of Eddie Cool of Philadelphia at New York. The lightweight limit is 135.

BUDDY BAER GETS SPOT ON DEC. 28 CARD AT STADIUM

Champion Max to Face King Levinsky.

Buddy Baer, 240 pound brother of Champion Max Baer, will appear in a supporting bout on the boxing card to be held at Chicago Stadium Dec. 28. His opponent will be announced tomorrow. The champion will meet King Levinsky, of Chicago's north side, in the four round main event.

Levinsky opened boxing drills yesterday at Trafton's gymnasium, after doing light exercises for ten days. The Kingfish weighed 207 pounds after the workout. Tony Canceia, Tampa, Fla., heavyweight, expects to fight in one of two matches at ten rounds. So does Al Ettore, Philadelphia.

Johnny Noto, flyweight; Mike Murphy, middleweight, and Johnny Kelly, featherweight, all of whom won titles in the recent Catholic Youth Organization tournament, will battle in three of the contests on the program sponsored by the Evanston Chamber of Commerce tomorrow at the Armory, Dodge and Church streets. Other C. Y. O. boxers scheduled to appear include George Sluka, Johnny Barbara, Harry Sparrow, Eddie Garvey, Claude Hinderleider, Mitchell Janus and John Anderson. Proceeds will go to charity.

Johnny Barbara, 1933 C. Y. O. lightweight runner-up, and Jules Sandraco will meet in the feature bout of an amateur show tonight at St. Willibrod hall, 114th street and Edbrooke avenue. . . . Andy Scrivani, 1934 C. Y. O. featherweight title holder, has been paired with Johnny Anderson at C. Y. O. center Thursday. . . . Another amateur show tonight will be presented under the auspices of the Holy Name society at Immaculate Conception gymnasium, 1421 North Park avenue. . . . The Rev. Paul M. Gilmore, president of the society, announced that Bob Elson and Jack Elder will serve as announcers, and Leo Rodak and Frank [Spike] McAdams will be referees.

Joe Louis, Detroit heavyweight, returned home yesterday where he will rest a week and then begin training for a combat against Patsy Perroni, Cleveland, at Detroit, Jan. 4. . . . James C. Mullen and Nate Lewis have obtained Jan. 11 and Jan. 25 for shows at the Stadium. . . . Louis is likely to box the windup engagement on the latter date.

Harry Dublinsky, prominent junior welterweight boxer, took a workout yesterday in anticipation of clashing with Sammy Fuller, Boston, at New York, Dec. 28. . . . Jimmy Gorey, ex-middleweight slugger, has been given permission to represent Allen Matthews, St. Louis 160 pounder, in Chicago. . . . The next card at Arcadia Gardens will be offered Jan. 8 or Jan. 16.

Cavalcade to Go West for Rich Stake

New York, July 17.—[Special.]—Barring accident or illness Mrs. Dodge Sloane's champion 3 year old colt, Cavalcade will compete in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in lower California on Feb. 23.

Bob Smith, who has charge of Mrs. Sloane's racing establishment, announced today that Cavalcade is training perfectly at the fair grounds at Columbia, S. C., that the colt has breezed fast and impressively half a dozen times recently, and has not taken a lame step. Last Saturday morning Cavalcade breezed five-eighths of a mile, hard held all the way, in 1:03, he said.

Injured Foot Is O. K.

The injured foot which kept the great colt out of the rich stakes last fall has thoroughly mended. He has a practically new foot and it seems strong and healthy. The veteran trainer does not believe it will again pain him or throw him out of training.

Cavalcade will not entrain for California until next month. Smith says the weather and training conditions at Columbia are ideal and that when the colt reaches the Pacific coast he will be fit and ready for competition.

In addition to Cavalcade, Smith plans to take six to seven other Brookmeade horses west with him. With the exception of the Florida Derby at Hialeah in which she will have an entry, Mrs. Sloane intends to do all her winter racing in California this season.

Florida Derby Hope.

World Series, a son of Pennant out of Fair Priscilla, probably will be her representative in the Florida Derby. He is going along splendidly. If he should go amiss between now and Jan. 15, Special Agent or Shining Jewel will be substituted for him.

High Quest, which beat Cavalcade by a head in the Preakness and was the only horse to beat the champion last season, is still at Columbia, but his racing days are over. As learned a fortnight ago, he bowed a tendon in a workout and pulled up so lame Smith decided to retire him rather than take the chance of crippling him permanently. High Quest will be sent to the Brookmeade farm in Virginia next week.

TAKES SHOT AT ONE RABBIT AND BAGS 2 OF THEM

Moline, Ill., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—E. P. Nutting, Moline school superintendent, earned a niche in the Nimrod's Hall of Fame yesterday when he bagged two rabbits with one shot on the Anderson farm near North Henderson, Ill. The freak killing occurred as Nutting's discharge at a fleeing rabbit caught another in its crossfire pattern. The shot is attested by Les Swanson, a newspaper reporter, who accompanied Nutting on the hunting expedition.

KILLS TWO FOXES.

Valparaiso, Ind., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Roland Miller, a farmer, killed two foxes with one shot while hunting here today.

Smith Wrestles Talaber at White City Tonight

Clarence Smith, Woodlawn light heavyweight, will wrestle Lou Talaber, former middleweight champion, in the 60 minute windup at the White City arena tonight. George Schwab and Joe Marsh, the latter of Omaha, will meet in the semi-windup. Rudy Kay tackles Buck O'Neil in a 30 minute match. Henry Forman faces Ernie Peterson and Ed Van Herrick clashes with Louis Sorenson.

Harry Buck Resigns as United Hunts Secretary

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Harry A. Buck, for the last twenty-five years secretary of the United Hunts Racing association, resigned today on account of ill health. He will continue his association with the Turf and Field club, however.

CRUSADERS SEEK 4TH VICTORY

The Crusaders Big Five will seek its fourth straight victory when it takes on Sheboygan, Wis., in a basketball game at the Savoy ballroom, 47th street and Grand boulevard, Friday night.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The world champion Blackhawks tonight will battle the Montreal Canadiens at Montreal in one of the instalments of their busiest week of the season to date. If they win or tie tonight they are assured of moving on to New York for Thursday's meeting with the Rangers still in possession of their unshared deed to first place of the American division of the National Hocky league.

After the Hawks play in New York they jump to Toronto to engage the spirited Maple Leafs, one of the two teams that have enjoyed victory at their expense. After the little matter in Toronto they come back home to meet the Canadiens Sunday night at Chicago Stadium.

Thus the champs will have played five games in eight nights, which is a lot of hocky, especially for a team that relies principally on speed.

Fans to Cast Eyes at Morenz.

Montreal's interest in the affair tonight is expected to center on the performance of Howie Morenz, who starred for the Canadiens in the years when he was hailed as hocky's fastest and most spectacular forward. For several seasons Canadien fans did not apply those terms to Howie, but they may again if he cuts loose tonight like he has in his last three games after much adversity and discouragement in earlier play.

The Hawks will take some time to observe the performance of Rog Jenkins, now with the Canadiens, who got his major league start with the Hawks and was a member of last year's championship team. The Hawks could use Rog now, since their only apparent weakness is in the defense line, but if they had Rog they wouldn't have Morenz, so you kinda have to figure those things on the basis of not being able to eat your cake and have it, too, or something like that.

Chabot Knows His Stops.

Everybody present tonight will know the Hawk goalie, M. Lorne Chabot, who just now is the leading goalie of the league by a margin of seven goals under his closest rival. Lorne has allowed only 17 goals, including five in the Chicago home opener, when the lads in front of him didn't help him much in what was observed as a memorial for the late Chuck Gardiner. Chabot's total is 30 under the number scored against St Louis and 29 under the total scored against the two New York Ranger goalies.

The Hawks moved east with a record of eight victories and three defeats. The Leafs beat them, 5 to 0, and the Americans, of all people, beat them in successive games, 2 to 0 and 2 to 1. They have been defeated only once more than the league leading Leafs, though the Toronto wizards have rung up twelve victories.

All Hawks were in good shape for the heavy play impending, except from minor injuries which annoyed Romnes, Coulter, and Trudel.

LEAFS DOMINATE SCORING

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Heavy scoring on most fronts of the National Hocky league during the last week is reflected in the weekly averages issued tonight from the offices of President Frank Calder, but has not produced any radical changes in the leadership.

Ebbie Goodfellow, transformed this season from a forward into a defense player, showed he still carries his scoring punch, for the big Detroit Red Wing is in a tie for leadership of the American section. He has had seven goals and an equal number of assists, and is tied with his teammate, Ralph Cooney Weiland, for first place.

Herbie Lewis Third.

Marty Barry of Boston also has scored seven goals, so that Goodfellow from a defense position is on even goal getting terms with a crack forward.

Herbie Lewis of the Wings is in third position in that section with twelve points. Players of the Toronto Maple Leafs still dominate the entire league. Harvey Busher Jackson maintained his phenomenal stride with five goals and two assists during the week, and now leads with 15 goals and 6 assists for 21 points, two in front of his teammate, Charlie Conacher.

Robinson Keeps Up Pace.

Earl Robinson, right wing of the Montreal Maroons, kept up his scoring pace, his goals including a successful penalty shot at Chicago. He has nine goals and four assists. Dave Shriner of the Americans is fourth with six goals and four assists. Red Horner of the Toronto Leafs still leads the league in penalties with 41 minutes.

Christy and Gibbons Win in Midway Bouts

Jimmy Christy, Chicago featherweight, and Jack Gibbons, 160 pound boxer from Minneapolis, Minn., were victors in the double windup at the Midway Arena last night. Christy defeated Dave Barry, Springfield, Ill., in 10 rounds, and Gibbons also was awarded a 10 round decision over Tony Zale, Gary, Ind.

Other results:

Sammy Adams beat Frank Keevil [4].
Eddie Jackson beat Hughie Allen [6].
Bobby Mullins beat Joey Esposito [5].

Will Play at Night.

All games will be played in the evenings instead of afternoon and evening, as originally planned. St. Mary's, Huntington, Ind., drew a bye in the opening round and will not play until Friday night.

St. Mary's and Corpus Christi have been made pre-tournament favorites to win the first leg on a large trophy, emblematic of the championship. The two teams have brilliant records for the season. St. Patrick, Kankakee, also appears to be a strong contender for the title. It defeated Catholic High of Joliet, national champion, last Friday night.

Semi-finals Carded Saturday.

In games Thursday, Weber will play Fenwick; St. George will oppose Leo; St. Patrick, Kankakee, faces St. Ignatius, and Holy Trinity will meet St. Patrick of Chicago. Four contests are scheduled for Friday, and semi-finals will be played Saturday night.

Quintets of the City and Catholic league continued preparations for the championship races yesterday. In one double header, Farragut's lightweight and heavyweight teams defeated St. Patrick. The Farragut heavies triumphed, 27 to 21, and the lights won, 28 to 27. The lightweight lineup:

BONTHRON READY TO BEGIN NEW TRACK CAMPAIGN

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—If Glenn Cunningham is willing, Bill Bonthron, former Princeton track star and holder of the world record of 3:48.8 for the 1,500 meters, will be ready to resume this winter the foot racing duels which featured the 1934 indoor and outdoor season.

Each won one test on the boards last year but Bonthron had the better of it outdoors, winning twice from the Kansas star against one defeat, the latter coming at Princeton June 16, when Glenn set his world mark of 4:06.7 for the mile.

Bonthron has been working out at the New York Athletic club for six weeks and says that unless business takes him out of town he will run in several of the major indoor meets in New York this winter.

Iowa Is Silent on Report Solem Will Be Coach at N. U.

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The question of Ossie Solem's resignation as University of Iowa football coach and athletic director "was not discussed either formally or informally" at a meeting of the board of control of athletics today, Prof. Clarence W. Updegraff, chairman, said tonight.

Prof. Updegraff said that "purely routine matters" were discussed at the regular board session. The chairman's report of the last western conference faculty meeting was read and the report of Solem as athletic director heard, he asserted.

He added that "the great interest which Mr. Solem has shown in his work here suggests that it would be difficult for any one to persuade him to leave."

Considerable anxiety was manifested by fans, however, as the result of a statement by Kenneth L. [Tug] Wilson, Northwestern athletic director. In a telephone conversation with a local newspaper Wilson is quoted as saying "Solem is among our first considerations."

Solem meanwhile continued to refuse to discuss the possibility that he will succeed Dick Hanley.

NORWEGIAN A. A. ENTERS SLEIPNER SKATING DERBY

The Norwegian-American A. A. will enter what promises to be its fleetest team of speed skating stars in the Sleipner A. C. 38th annual derby scheduled for Dec. 31 and Jan. 1 at Humboldt park. The two day meet will feature the local Olympic trials.

Outstanding on the Norwegian-American team is Leo Friesinger, who has a perfect record in various championship events. Having never lost a race during the 1933-1934 skating season, Leo believes he can keep his record unbroken when he meets such veterans as Ed. Schroeder, Al Kucera, Wilbur Marks, and Eddie Stundl. Friesinger's most important titles are the intermediate national and North American titles.

This winter Friesinger will make his debut as a senior and will have as his team mates Kucera and Marks. Marks won the 440 yard dash titles in both the national and North American meets.

St. Procopius Defeats Chicago Tech, 40 to 25

Deficit May Lead Gunners to Sell Out

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 17.—(AP)—The National Professional Football league franchise of the St. Louis Gunners was in jeopardy today as the result of a poor season financially, climaxed yesterday with the attachment of an exhibition game's gate receipts.

Ed Butler, president of the Gunners, today said a meeting of interested persons would be held Thursday to determine the future of the franchise. He did not disclose any names, but said several "people from the east" are interested in the possibility of moving the franchise.

Club Loses Money.

The president said his club, which acquired the National league franchise from Cincinnati six weeks ago, had lost money this year, in addition to that spent for the franchise. Some of the players remain unpaid, he said, but indicated a reorganization plan, which would straighten out the salary problem, was being considered.

The Gunners' financial woes hit a new high yesterday when their 7 to 0 victory over the Kansas City Blues, American professional football champions, was anti-climaxed by the attachments. The St. Louis Soccer league filed an attachment for $1,350, representing two weeks' rent on Sportsman's Park, plus court costs; and the federal government filed a $1,700 tax claim for this season and 1933.

Thus, of the money taken in at the gate, the Gunners will have nothing left after the Blues receive their full share of $1,620, of which they have been paid $1,200.

In the heavyweight class, the East Chicago Gophers, defending champions, will clash with the Gano A. C. The Gophers are led by Steve Banas, former half back from Notre Dame, and Gallivan, one time quarter back at Illinois. The Gano A. Entry blanks received today from nine Nassau amateurs, including Gov. Bede Clifford, increased the field to 60. Favorite to win the $50 first prize is Olin Dutra, United States open champion and low scorer last week in the Miami Biltmore open.

Columbus, O., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—For the first time in the history of Ohio State university, several football fans have placed their orders for 1935 tickets. Valparaiso and De Paul Quintets Meet Tomorrow

De Paul university's basketball team will travel to Valparaiso in quest of its 21st successive victory tomorrow night.

Despite the 52 to 14 triumph over Kalamazoo last Saturday, Coach Jim Kelly was dissatisfied with the team's passing. Kalamazoo was off form and did not provide much of a test for De Paul.

The Demon attack was led by two centers who are fighting for first string recognition. Nich Yost, sophomore star, paced the scoring with 14 points, while Walt Diduch, giant of the squad, scored 11 points.

Capt. Frank Linskey and Phil Krause, the guard combination used in the first half of the Kalamazoo contest, looked impressive, and Coach Kelly may employ the same lineup tomorrow night against the Hoosiers.

Temple Picks 33 Players to Go South

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 17.—(AP)—The 33 members of the Temple university football squad who will make the trip to New Orleans for the Sugar bowl game with Tulane on New Year's day were picked today by Coach Glenn [Pop] Warner.

Although one of Warner's high hopes, Dave Smukler, line smashing full back, spent the day in the hospital with a light attack of grip, his name was near the top of the list.

Another member of the squad on which Warner depends to carry on Temple's unbeaten 1934 record is down with laryngitis—Roy Lorenz, end.

Invalids to Be Ready.

Both Smukler and Lorenz are expected to be back in shape in time to leave Philadelphia with the squad Thursday. In each case the hospitalization was more a precaution than treatment.

Linemen called for service in the sectional game are:

Lorenz, Elmer Anderson, James Baker, John Boyd, Charles Kemmerer, Richard Landis, William Docherty, Stanley Gurzynski, Amedio Ippolito, Maurice Liston, Chester Messervy, James Russell, Frank Schaefer, Thomas Miller, Peter Stevens, Lloyd Wise, Joseph Zanin, Harry Zastrow, John Zukas, John Hartman.

Backs on the squad include:

Smukler, Glenn Frey, William Davison, John Konopa, Wilfred Bongsderff, Joseph Egan, George Paul, John Kusco, Horace Mowrey, John Stonik, Daniel Testa, Don Watts, Gordon Smith.

Take Light Workout.

The squad spent today's practice period in ball tossing and a general light workout. Scrimmaging will be deferred until the arrival at Baton Rouge, La., Saturday. Immediately on their arrival Warner will put his boys through their paces on the Louisiana State university field, where the Temple squad will train.

Corboy, faculty regent of athletics at Creighton university, resigned today because of failing health and a committee of four Jesuit educators was named to direct all athletics until a successor is named probably next June. The Rev. Patrick J. Mahan, president of Creighton, appointed the Rev. B. J. Quinn, chairman of the committee which also will comprise the Rev. Joseph P. Brelin Named President of Medinah Club

Perry B. Brelin is the new president of the Medinah Country club. Other officers elected at the annual meeting of the big west side club are George J. Lawton, vice president; Charles J. La Mena, treasurer; and Samuel F. Block, secretary.

The board of directors for the three year term includes David Adams, James Dawson, Herman J. Fischer, John Rittermal, and Gerald Rolfes, and for the one year term, Alfred Hinkleman and Floyd Pinckney.

Predicts 1,200 Members.

Larry Rutherford, chairman of the golf committee, reports the club in good financial condition, and predicted a full enrollment of 1,200 members for the 1935 season, inasmuch as more than 1,100 now are in good standing. Among the 1934 accomplishments were the installation of fairway irrigation systems on the No. 1 and No. 3 courses; the paving of the road into the club, and the planting of more than 4,000 trees and shrubs around the clubhouse, tees and fairways.

The program adopted for next year includes a systematic plan of eventually retiring the first mortgage bond issue by a regular monthly charge against each member, and the approval of the membership to water the remaining layout, the No. 2 course, as soon as funds are available, which it is expected will be next year.

Greens Are Rebuilt.

Medinah also has made considerable improvements on its No. 1 and No. 3 courses, rebuilding the seventh and thirteenth greens on No. 3; enlarging them and replacing bent grass, and changing the drainage conditions and the general shape of the greens. It also has resodded a number of tees o.. No. 3.

On the No. 1 course, four greens are being completely rebuilt and resodded with new bent. Par is being changed to 70, as two of the par five holes on the first nine are being changed to long par four holes. The second hole will be 440 yards long, and the sixth 445 yards, while the green on the fifth hole is being moved across the water pond the hole is thus being lengthened from 270 yards to 370.

In the opinion of Tom Armour, club professional, these changes will make No. 1 a real test of golf.

JIM McMILLEN THROWS SLAGEL IN 27 MINUTES

Jim McMillen, Chicago heavyweight wrestler, threw Sol Slagel, Topeka, Kas., with a body slam in 27 minutes and 10 seconds in the windup of the wrestling show at the Coliseum last night. Slagel substituted for Joe Savoldi, who was injured in Medford, Ore., several days ago.

Promoter Doc Krone announced the attendance as 1,552 and the receipts, $1,340.

Three of the four preliminary matches ended in draws. Jack Smith and Fred Grubmier went 30 minutes; Hans Bauer and Jerry Gordon went 20 minutes and Ole Olson and Mahomet Yousuf drew in 30 minutes. In the other bout on the card Abe Coleman pinned Tommy Marvin in 20 minutes and 49 seconds.

STANFORD STAR RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS INJURIES

Grayson to Be Ready for Alabama Game.

Palo Alto, Cal., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Bobby Grayson, Stanford's star full back, has completely recovered from serious injuries suffered Nov. 24 and will be ready for Alabama and the New Year's day Rose Bowl football game at Pasadena.

This cheering news was given to Coach Claude [Tiny] Thornhill by Team Physician Dr. Fitz Roth today. Dr. Roth said Grayson's torn rib cartilages had mended and he could return to practice at once.

Five other Stanford players, crippled or sick, also were pronounced either completely well or nearly recovered. James Moscrip and Keith Topping, regular ends, will be ready for workouts. They have been on the shelf for weeks with wrenched knees. Claude Callaway, tackle; Jack Drown, first reserve tackle, and Frank Alustiza, quarter back, have shaken off illnesses.

The only casualty remaining, Stan Anderson, first substitute for Grayson, still is under observation. He was sent to the hospital last week suffering from a heavy cold which threatened to develop into pneumonia.

ALABAMA GETS IN SHAPE.

University, Ala., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Taking advantage of every practice period without regard to weather conditions, Alabama's crimson tide went through a dummy scrimmage on a wet field today as preparations moved steadily forward for the New Year's Rose Bowl engagement with Stanford university.

Only three more practice sessions remain before the squad boards a train that will reach Pasadena Christmas eve. The football party is scheduled to leave Friday.

No further injuries have developed since Bob Ed Morrow, guard, showed up with a broken nose after a practice session last week.

Fast Freighters and Stage Liners to Meet Tonight

Chicago's second Missouri Valley A. A. U. basketball league season will begin tonight at Loyola university gymnasium when the Fast Freights start their campaign against the defending champions, the Kansas City Stage Liners.

A month's steady drill and a few practice games have put the Freighters in excellent condition. The Chicago club again is led by Joe Reiff, former Northwestern player, who seems headed for one of the best seasons of his career.

He will team at forward with Werner Frank, veteran of last year's team. Another former Northwestern captain, Nelson Culver, will make his debut with the Freights at guard. The other sentinel will be Jim Hogan, who led the Loyola forces last season. The only non-collegian among the starters is Vince McGowen, the 6 foot 7 inch center, with Tony Carp, of the same height, in reserve. Others who will see action are Sol Farber, formerly of Northwestern; Rube Cooper, who played with City College of New York last year, and Nick Christian, forward.

The Missourians will have Booth Meyers and Ray Piper at the forward positions. Meyers is from Wichita university, and Piper comes from Phillips university of Enid, Okla. Herman Fisher, guard, is from Maryville, Mo., Teachers' college. The other guard is King Wallenstrom from the University of Missouri. Dick Quinn, the center, is 6 feet 5 inches tall and is from Rockhurst college of Kansas City.

The two teams played a spirited game last year, Kansas City winning 31 to 27, in overtime, after the Freighters relinquished a 17 to 9 half-time advantage.

In a preliminary starting at 8 o'clock the North Avenue-Larrabee Y. M. C. A. heavyweights will play the Kemper Insurance quintet.

W. L. HARDING, IOWA FORMER GOVERNOR, DIES

G. O. P. Stalwart Stricken Ill While Campaigning.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—W. L. Harding, 57, governor of Iowa from 1917 to 1921, died here today after an illness which began in September when he was stricken while making a Republican campaign speech in Indiana.

W. L. HARDING.

A party stalwart in Iowa for years, as well as a national figure in politics, Mr. Harding was engaged in law practice in Des Moines at the time of his death.

Born near Sibley, Ia., the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Harding, he was educated at Morningside college and the University of South Dakota. He began practicing law at Sioux City, Ia., and was elected to the Iowa house of representatives for six years. He next was elected lieutenant governor in 1912 and was reëlected in 1914.

In 1916 Mr. Harding won the governorship after a close fight with E. T. Meredith, later secretary of agriculture under former President Wilson. He defeated Claude R. Porter for reëlection in 1918 and retired to practice law in 1921.

During his administration as governor Iowa ratified the prohibition and the women's suffrage amendments, created the state board of conservation, and adopted legislation to abolish prison labor contracts and lay the foundation of the present highway system.

Former Gov. Harding maintained close touch with Republican politics after dropping from public life. He was in demand throughout the country and until his illness was a regular speaker under the Republican national headquarters.

Vigorous Critic of New Deal.

Mr. Harding was a vigorous critic of the Roosevelt administration. He was considered a "regular" in the Iowa Republican party, but his sense of humor helped smooth over many rifts, particularly when Smith W. Brookhart was elected United States senator from Iowa despite opposition of party chiefs.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete today, but burial will be at Sioux City. Mr. Harding's body may lie in state at the Iowa capitol before the services. His widow and a daughter, Barbara, survive.

CORONER ORDERS QUIZ IN DEATH OF 'HEALTH COUNSEL'

Doubt Cast on 'Suicide' of Chester Levere.

Unable to establish a suicide motive, the coroner's office yesterday ordered an investigation into the death of Chester Levere, elderly "strong man" and health counselor found dead in bed earlier in the day in his home at 519 Gregory avenue, Wilmette.

Wilson H. Eastman, 1125 Forest avenue, Wilmette, found the body early in the morning when he called for a health treatment. He notified Chief of Police Henry Brautigam of Wilmette. A glass containing water and some crystals was found beside the bed. A note on a desk downstairs, addressed to Levere's son, Chester Jr., read:

"To my loving son and friends, good-by. Chet."

Son Denies Suicide Theory.

The son, who had been visiting his mother, from whom Lever was divorced, in Glen Ellyn, declared that, despite the note and the glass found, his father "couldn't have committed suicide."

"Father was in excellent health," he said. "His financial affairs were in good shape and he had been in excellent spirits. Why, he was even planning to move to a nicer house. There just isn't anything that could have impelled father to end his life."

Mrs. Florence Mercer, 2106 Lake street, Evanston, friend and "patient" of Levere, also cast doubt on the suicide theory. "Mr. Levere usually got up to exercise at 4 a. m.," she said. "Apparently he was seized with illness, penned a hasty note, and reached his bedroom before he died."

Tell of Sunday Party.

However, four girls who were guests of Levere for a swim in the Shawnee Country club pool Sunday and at dinner in his home later recalled his cryptic remark: "I wonder if I'll be as happy in heaven as I am tonight."

The guests were Miss Lurlene Griffith, 228 South Wabash avenue, dancing instructor, and three of her students, the Misses Mariana Owen, 1658 Farwell avenue, Alice Green, 1740 North Long avenue, and Helen Rankin, 1345 North Keeley avenue.

A coroner's inquest was set for today at the undertaking establishment at 1115 Greenleaf avenue, Wilmette. The contents of the glass beside Levere's bed were turned over to the coroner's chemist for analysis, and a post-mortem examination to determine the cause of death was ordered.

Although the son gave Levere's age as 74 years, Levere had previously insisted he was born in 1870. In his youth he fought in the prize ring under the name of "the Tornado Flash." In his later years he claimed the rope skipping championship.

JAMES B. CLEWS, BROKER IN N. Y., IS DEAD AT 70

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—James Blanchard Clews, 70, senior partner in the brokerage house of Henry Clews & Co., died today. He had been ill for several years.

He succeeded to the senior partnership in the brokerage house in 1918 on the death of his uncle, Henry Clews.

Soon after graduation from Chamberlin college, Clews was elected president of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Michigan railroad and was known as the "boy president."

KRIENS, CONCERT VIOLINIST, SHOT DEAD IN HOME

West Hartford, Conn., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Christiaan A. Kriens, 54, widely known concert violinist and until recently musical director at a Hartford radio station, was found shot to death late today in his home here.

Dr. Henry B. Rollins, medical examiner, pronounced Kriens' death suicide, saying the musician wrote two notes expressing despondency over his loss of employment and then sent a bullet through his right temple as he sat in his bedroom.

Mrs. Kriens, his second wife, went to the bedroom upon hearing the shot and found her husband sitting in the chair dead.

Kriens, a native of Holland, who came to the United States a few years ago, addressed one of the notes to his wife and the other to a stepdaughter, Miss Ann Paige.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Clara, Lu 'n' Em have just signed another contract with their sponsor, insuring their appearance on the airways for another year. There is a clause which permits cancellation at the end of thirteen weeks, as is customary in such contracts, but there was also a substantial increase in pay for the chattering girls—Louise Starkey, Isobel Carothers and Helen King.

Clara, Lu 'n' Em have been on the air over W-G-N since the summer of 1930; on W-G-N and NBC with their present sponsor since Jan. 27, 1931. Thus their new contract will put them into their sixth year on the air. They have the oldest feminine act in radio. They must get a chuckle out of recalling the rejection they got from an NBC executive when they first asked for an audition.

"Nobody would listen to a program written and presented entirely by women," they were informed.

Another royal broadcast is in the offing. Christening ceremonies for Maria Pia di Savoia, infant daughter of Crown Prince Humberto and Princess Marie José of Italy next Saturday in Naples will be shortwaved to America and rebroadcast over NBC at 8 a. m. King Victor, Queen Elena, and Premier Mussolini will be on hand for the services.

A note to parents: Let your youngsters stay up an extra hour next Sunday evening to hear Walt Disney and Mickey and Minnie Mouse. [Perhaps the family cat would appreciate it, too.] Appearing as the "mouseter of ceremonies" on the Hall of Fame hour, Mickey will wave the baton over his Silly Symphony orchestra while Minnie squeaks "Il Trovatore." Dippy Dog, Horace Horsecollar, Clarabelle Cow, Donald Duck, Clara Cluck and the Three Little Pigs will all lend a hand in the broadcast.

The Boswell sisters have finished up their broadcasts with Bing Crosby and are on their way home from Hollywood to New Orleans to spend Christmas with their family. Bing will use guest singers for three weeks and then the Mills brothers will join his program for ten weeks.

If you hear Boake Carter, news commentator, at his usual hour at 6:45 o'clock tonight you may be certain that the Broadway Limited got into Lima, O., about five or ten minutes early. It's due there at 6:45. The broadcast is to be picked up at that point by telephone wires plugged into the observation car. Last night Carter broadcast from the model raiod rooms at the Drake hotel. If you haven't seen these yet a visit may give you some Christmas ideas.

John Harrington, former W-G-N commentator, now assistant manager of KWK, St. Louis, wrote yesterday regarding a poll his station had taken on Father Coughlin. An air poll on whether to continue carrying the Detroit priest's broadcast drew more than 100,000 ayes, 129 nays. . . . Charlie Gaylord's orchestra will support Don Mario on that Musical Romance program beginning next Sunday. Gaylord has been in pictures with Eddie Cantor and Bing Crosby.

90 BUSINESS LEADERS WELD RECOVERY UNIT

Industry to Answer New Deal Challenge.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 17.—Formation of a liaison group representing a united business front to bring about recovery through coöperation with the government was undertaken here today at the opening session of the Joint Business Conference for Recovery, a conference of ninety picked business leaders.

C. B. AMES.

The new organization will not be a new trade association, but will include representatives of existing associations—manufacturers, chambers of commerce, bankers and others interested in bringing about recovery by orthodox methods. Details are undecided, but a membership of fifteen is being considered.

This liaison group, backed by a platform now being devised by the delegates to the conference here, is to be American industry's answer to what it regards as President Roosevelt's challenge to enter into a "partnership" with the government.

Name Ten Subcommittees.

To give this as yet embryonic unification of business interests form and purpose is the reason for this conference. Within two hours after the general meeting began this morning ten subcommittees had been named to draw up planks for a general industrial platform to be submitted to President Roosevelt, and these subcommittees had retired to separate rooms to thresh out a multitude of highly controversial issues.

Until a late hour tonight and all day tomorrow, Mr. Ames said, these groups will fight their way to agreement in order that a tentative platform may be submitted before the general conference at a night session tomorrow night.

On Wednesday the conference hopes to give the business men's program for recovery its final touches and have it ready to submit to the President.

Present at what Mr. Ames calls this "epochal" gathering are the hundred business leaders recently invited by the National Association of Manufacturers and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to formulate a recovery program.

Corporation Bosses Attend.

Some are members of these associations, others were picked from the outside. Unlike most business conventions, this one is made up mostly of the top man from each corporation represented. Nor do the delegates wear badges.

When the delegates stepped off their trains at this little mountain village an hour before dawn today they were still asking each other the purpose of this meeting, but by noon most of them were already hard at work helping draw up some section of industry's platform for recovery.

"This is a business conference called upon the invitation of a joint committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers," Chairman Ames said in a prepared statement issued while the conferees were working behind closed doors.

"It is composed of men of experience in every form of industrial and commercial activity who have been asked to apply their individual judgment to the critical problems before the country. They are animated by a common desire to coöperate in the formulation of constructive suggestions and to coöperate further with public authority in every practical method of improving our present condition.

Offer No Cure-Alls.

"One thing I should like to make plain. We represent at this conference only ourselves as business men. We are not seeking to prescribe specially for all American business. We are, however, frankly exchanging views and if it develops that there is substantial accord on a program within which business may coöperate, these harmonious views will be given expression for the consideration of the business interests of the country.

"We may not attempt to produce a highly detailed blue print of the ways to recovery. What we must do in the meetings is to decide among ourselves the sound principles under which all business can collaborate in helping to produce an era of good feeling and understanding in this country.

"Formulas are useless unless the attitude of the people who can help recovery most is in sight.

"Business thinking has crystalized in a remarkable fashion in the last two months. What we cannot conclude in the period of this conference we will undoubtedly carry into future meetings. For this gathering presages a unity of business thought that must be preserved in other than mere resolutions."

Tackling Giant Problem.

Achieving this "unity of thought" is the almost Herculean task which the conferees will try to accomplish in the short space of three days. With congress about to reconvene the industrialists are making a big effort to compose their differences and devise a credo back of which these may stand in unison.

This is by no means easy. Represented here are manufacturers who want high tarifs and distributors who want low tarifs. Some, like James Rand and Robert E. Wood, favor

NRA Calls Trade Parley on Price Fixing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—A series of hearings at which American business will be invited to discuss with the NRA such broad recovery policies as price fixing, code administration, and employment conditions, was announced today by S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery board.

Williams explained that NRA is launching this new forum in an effort to get business advice on future NRA administrative policies and legislation. Williams expects to conduct all the hearings. The subject for the first hearing will be the NRA's tentative decision to eliminate price fixing from almost all codes.

Will Hold Public Hearing.

This preliminary decision on price fixing will not be affirmed or revised, Williams explained, until after Jan. 9, when a public hearing will be held at which "any interested party" may appear to argue for or against continuation of price fixing.

Even though the tentative decision to eliminate pricing provisions is affirmed, Williams said, no individual codes containing such provisions will be modified by NRA until the industry involved has been notified and been allowed a hearing. Gradually, however, the NRA hopes to eliminate all price fixing except that designed for emergencies or for special industries, notably the natural resource industries.

The Jan. 9 hearing on price fixing will be the first of a series of "policy hearings," at which industry will be invited to discuss broad NRA policies such as production control, small businesses and minorities, code administration, and employment conditions.

Board's Announcement.

In the resolution launching the "policy hearings" and setting the date for the price fixing inquiry, the NIRB said:

"The board hereby announces as its prposal for this first hearing and as its present position with respect to price fixing that in the usual case it is inconsistent with the most effective functioning of our industrial system to have in or under codes of fair competition price fixing in the form of permanent schedules of minimum prices, with or without mandatory costing systems for the purpose of establishing minimum prices.

"The board recognizes the value of permissive cost systems, emergency price provisions, and the dangers to the economic structure of destructive price cutting. It also recognizes that minimum prices may be proper for the normal operations of certain types of industry, but, in such cases, government supervision and control would naturally tend to be increased."

Pending the outcome of this hearing the NRA will withhold action on 140 requests for price fixing which are now before it.

GOLD CURRENCIES GAIN ON DOLLAR; STERLING LOWER

New York, Dec. 17. — [Special.] — French francs rallied today to the best price since Oct. 26, closing up ½ point net from Saturday at 6.60 cents. The improvement, which carried the franc nearly a point above the price at which gold imports from Paris to this country are profitable, was shared by the guilder with an increase of 3 points to 67.66 cents and the belga 2 points to 23.40 cents. The Swiss franc gained 3 points at 32.42 cents, but continued below the gold import point, while the belga was just at the gold point.

Sterling fell 1 cent to $4.94 and the currencies linked to it were correspondingly weak. The Scandinavian exchanges were down 7 points, the yen was off 5 points to 28.87 cents and the Canadian dollar dropped 3-32 cent to 1 per cent premium. The principal Chinese units broke sharply on rumors of impending devaluation by 25 per cent in the Shanghai dollar. A break of 0.92½ of a cent occurred in the latter unit, while Hongkong dollars lost 0.65 of a cent.

An additional $3,000,000 gold was engaged abroad for shipment here, bringing to $191,000,000 the total engaged since Nov. 1. The latest purchases were in India and in South America. Since Feb. 1, when the dollar was revalued, about $994,000,000 gold has been bought abroad by this country. The federal reserve bank reported the receipt of $1,764,300 gold.

The price of bar gold in London was advanced 1½ pence to 140 shilling 7 pence [$34.79] per fine ounce at which price $331,536 of the metal changed hands.

STEVENS HOTEL RECEIVERSHIP FEES APPROVED

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday approved fees aggregating $45,500 for services and expenses of administration of the equity receivership of the Stevens Hotel company, which is now being reorganized under section 77-B of the amended bankruptcy law. The hotel property has been in receivership since June, 1932, and involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were instituted in federal court on June 19.

The Harris Trust and Savings bank, trustee of the company's first mortgage bonds, dated July 1, 1925, was awarded $25,000 for services which included the filing of the original receivership petition. A fee of $20,000 was granted jointly to the law firms of Winston, Strawn, & Shaw and Chapman & Cutler, as attorneys for the Harris Trust and Savings bank. Attorney George E. Fidler, counsel for the hotel company in the receivership proceedings, received $500.

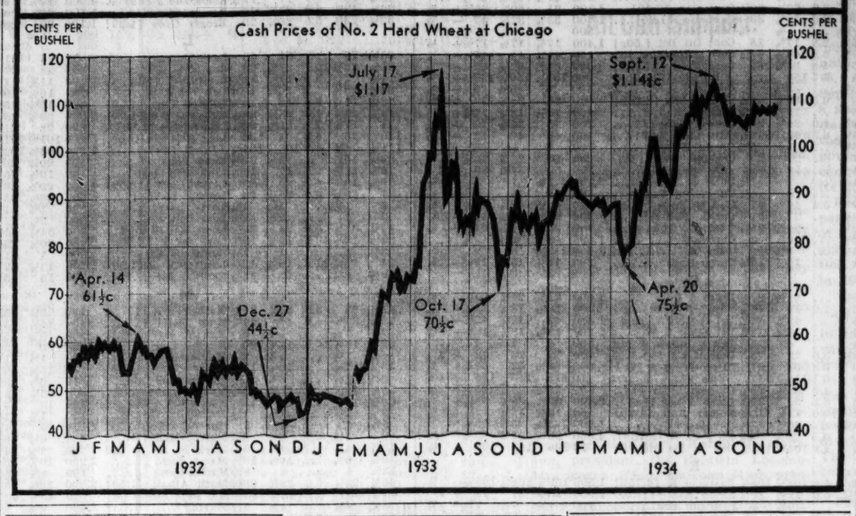
New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—A new issue of $20,500,000 Canadian National Railways 16 year 3 per cent refunding bonds was awarded today to a Canadian banking group headed by McLeod, Young, Weir & Co., Ltd. The bonds were awarded at a price of $98.75, equivalent to an interest cost of 3.10 per cent to the road. The bonds are payable in Canadian funds.

How the Price of Cash Wheat Fluctuated During the Past Three Years



Highest Court to Review Rail Retirement Act

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—The United States Supreme court today agreed to review the railway retirement act, a piece of New Deal legislation that recently was held unconstitutional by the District of Columbia Supreme court. The granting of a writ of certiorari to the government assures an early hearing in the case, affecting more than 1,000,000 employés and all the class 1 railroads of the country.

The government took the case directly to the Supreme court, under a special provision of the judicial code, without recourse to the intermediate Appellate court of the district. This was done in the hope that it could be finally decided in time to give congress a chance to pass another law if necessary.

Rails Get Injunction.

The railways attacked the retirement act in the District Supreme court and obtained an injunction restraining the railroad retirement board from inforcing the law, adopted June 27, 1934. The court held the act invalid on three different grounds, principally because it applies to all railway employés, whether or not they are engaged in interstate commerce.

The carriers contend that the terms of the act would cost them $60,000,000 the first year. It provides for compulsory retirement at the age of 65, or on 30 years service, and for contributions from the employers and the employés, to be administered by the treasury. Until further ruling of the retirement board, the contributions are to be 4 per cent of the total pay roll from the carriers and 2 per cent from the employés.

Rehearing Is Ordered.

The Supreme court, before adjourning until Jan. 7, also ordered a rehearing of arguments in another railway case attacking the validity of a Tennessee statute requiring the carriers to pay half the cost of grade crossing eliminations.

The suit was brought by the Nashville-Chattanooga and St. Louis road. The case is important because of the government's policy of requiring grade separations on federal aid roads, and the plan, being considered by the administration, to make grade separations a part of its public works program.

SHEAFFER PEN PAYS BONUS TO 1,000 EMPLOYES

Fort Madison, Ia., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—This city of some 14,000 persons received an unexpected Christmas present today when the W. A. Sheaffer Pen company distributed to its approximately 1,000 workers here bonus checks amounting to 4 per cent of the earnings of each employé for the entire year. Since the company is the leading industry of the city, the payment of the bonus means much to the community's prosperity.

At the same time W. A. Sheaffer, president of the company, announced that a substantial dividend will be paid to the stockholders in March, 1935, after a lapse of two years. He said 1934 sales have moved upward each month, with the result that at the close of the fiscal year, Feb. 28, 1935, the company expects to report profits considerably in excess of 1933, when the net was $236,000.

In addition to the bonus to be paid the 1,000 workers here, payments will be paid to members of the sales force and to employés of the branches throughout the country.

ELGIN WATCH CO. TO EMPLOY MORE IF TARIF STAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Reëmployment of 1,700 persons by the Elgin National Watch company, Elgin, Ill., may soon be possible if improvement continues and the federal government does not agree to lower the tarif on Swiss watches, T. Albert Potter, president of the Elgin company, told the United States tarif commission today.

Mr. Potter appeared to protest against the proposed reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Switzerland. The agreement would reduce the tarif on Swiss, and possibly other watches. Supporting Mr. Potter were officials of the Hamilton and Waltham watch companies. A statement by the American Jeweled Manufacturers association described these three companies as the only ones not already driven out of business by foreign competition.

ICKES REQUESTS LAW FOR FEDERAL RULE OF STATES' OIL OUTPUT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—A recommendation that the government be permitted to limit arbitrarily the oil production of states is put forward in a legislative program to conserve petroleum resources submitted privately by Secretary Ickes to the Cole oil subcommittee of the house interstate commerce committee.

Secretary Ickes, who yesterday caed for a correlated plan to conserve national resources, has urged the committee to draft legislation that would permit the government to go further than it now can, under he petroleum code, in controling production and distribution. He also urged legislation "with teeth in it" to permit him to restrict the production and sale of oil produced in excess of quotas which the government is now permitted only to recommend to states. The difficulty of restricting the sale of this "hot oil" has been one of the major problems of the petroleum administration.

By generally tightening up restrictions Ickes hopes to raise the price of gasoline sold to oil stations from the present level of 3½ to 4 cents a gallon to 4½ to 5 cents. This would, in his opinion, protect independent producers and at the same time preserve national resources. He is understood to believe that activities of the independents will prevent a price rise to the public on gasoline and oil it buys.

LABOR BOARD READY FOR AUTO UNION ELECTION

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The automobile labor board today completed the details of its first election of a collective bargaining committee by employés of the Cadillac Motor Car company to be held Wednesday. This is a primary election to nominate candidates for the bargaining committee, and the final election will be held Dec. 28.

Prof. Francis E. Ross of the University of Michigan, who will be in charge of the election, has hired 25 men, mostly accountants, who will assist in operating polling places in the Cadillac plant.

Firestone Fights Plan.

Akron, O., Dec. 17.—(AP)—A promise that "any and all" steps will be taken by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company to prevent the enforcement of the National Labor Relations board's order for an employés' election was made today to Firestone stockholders by President John W. Thomas. The Firestone plant will have an average gain of 7 per cent in production next year compared to 1934, Thomas said.

Continue Auto Probe.

Flint, Mich., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Behind closed doors, the government continued its inquiry here today into conditions in the automotive industry with a view to framing a policy of employment regularization and general improvement of labor conditions before the automobile code expires early in February.

UTILITY'S LOAN EXTENDED, BONDS ARE RETURNABLE

The $8,000,000 of first lien collateral 5 per cent gold bond series A of the Gary Electric and Gas company have been extended under the plan of reorganization and bondholders may obtain these bonds from the depositary, John N. Shannahan, president, stated yesterday.

Bondholders who have not deposited their bonds also are entitled to benefit under the plan of reorganization. Mr. Shannahan said that these holders should present their bonds to the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, of Chicago, trustee under the bond issue, for the purpose of having the proper extension legend, extension coupons and stock warants affixed.

Under the plan the maturity of the bonds is extended to July 1, 1944, with the present rate of interest continuing during that period. The holder of each $1,000 bond is to receive a warant for 15 shares of the company's capital stock.

Northern Trust Expected to Pay Usual Dividend

It is expected in La Salle street that the directors of the Northern Trust company at their meeting today will declare the regular quarterly dividend of $4.50 a share, payable Jan. 2, thereby maintaining the $18 rate, in effect since 1931, for the entire year 1934.

Steel Output Rises to 34.6%; See 60% in '35

New York, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Continuing the rise of the last several weeks, steel operations for the current week were estimated by the American Iron and Steel institute at 34.6 per cent, which marks the highest point since last summer. In the previous week the indicated rate was 32.7 per cent. It was 27.6 per cent a month ago and 34.2 per cent a year ago. The gain over last week was 1.9 points or 5.8 per cent.

The institute has prescribed heavier penalties to discourage violations of the steel industry's code provisions.

Predict Revival Next Year.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Optimistic steel men today predicted that the industry will be revived in the first half of 1935 to a 60 per cent operating rate and possibly more.

A $100,000,000 program of new equipment, most of which is now in progress, is based on the belief that demands for steel will come not only from the automobile and railroad industries and from public works projects but also from the increased buying power of the farmer which, steel men say, is potentially up $1,000,000,000 and may be more before the year ends.

Last Thursday a trainload of farm equipment left the International Harvester plant in Indianapolis with forty-five carloads of tractors, cream separators, and stationary engines. This is the first such shipment that has left the plant since 1929. Steel circles believe farm implement sales will go to 50 per cent of the peak mark.

Rely On Public Works.

Public works programs that failed to emerge last year will figure in the 1935 demand for steel. Railway requirements have reached an acute stage and demands from that source are expected to become active early in the year.

Diesel motored trains, air conditioning, electric refrigerators and other household equipment, renovising, new turret tops of the automobile world, and miscellaneous other demands, present themselves as part of a picture that is spreading optimism throughout the steel industry that is being backed up with a huge outlay of cash.

Included in this cash outlay is $40,000,000 worth of modernization for the United States Steel corporation, $19,000,000 by the Ford Motor company for new steel production equipment, $12,000,000 for expansion of the Great Lakes Steel corporation by its parent, the National Steel corporation, a $7,000,000 steel mill being built by the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, and a $500,000 item for a new electric weld tube mill building by the Republic Steel corporation.

BANKERS' BILLS DROP SHARPLY FROM YEAR AGO

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The volume of outstanding bankers' acceptances fell $221,211 in November to a total of $561,380,541 at the end of that month, it was announced today by the American Acceptance council. The total on Nov. 30, last year, was $758,212,098.

Although the total thus remained virtually unchanged, there were important changes in the outstanding volume of the various types of acceptance credits. The most important change was a rise of $10,364,057 in warehouse acceptance credits. There was also a rise of $1,682,523 in bills drawn to finance exports.

Against these gains there were reductions of $4,003,214 in bills for import transactions, $1,844,351 in bills drawn to create dollar exchange and of $176,281 in domestic acceptance credits. The volume of acceptances based on goods stored in or shipped between foreign countries fell $6,243,945 in the month to $126,872,736.

SWIFT & CO. HAS BEST EARNINGS IN THREE YEARS

Sales, Profits Show Sharp Increases.

Sharp increases in both sales and profits were attained by Swift & Co., world's largest meat packers, during the fiscal year ended Oct. 27, G. F. Swift, president, revealed yesterday in his annual report to stockholders.

G. F. SWIFT.

While Mr. Swift characterized the year as only "fairly successful," it was the best since 1931 with dollar volume of sales 29½ per cent above 1933, tonnage 8 per cent heavier, and net profit 12½ per cent larger.

Sales aggregated $619,000,000, an increase of $119,000,000 over the previous year, and $84,000,000 over two years ago. Net profit amounted to $11,432,492 after taxes and charges, but before addition of $6,500,000 to inventory reserves.

Earns $1.95 Per Share.

The reported net profit is equal to $1.95 per share on 5,897,730 shares of capital stock outstanding and compares with net of $10,297,378, or $1.72 a share on 5,895,527 shares, in the preceding fiscal year.

Earnings per share after deduction of the inventory reserve appropriation are equal to 83 cents a share. Dividend payments for the year amounted to 50 cents a share.

Current assets as of Oct. 27 are carried in the balance sheet at $171,506,892 and current liabilities at $22,414,603, against $159,879,612 and $19,313,898, respectively, at the close of the previous year.

Results for the year again were affected by the movement of prices, Mr. Swift said, adding that although wool and hide prices declined, average wholesale meat values increased 37 per cent.

"Use of meat and lard was nearly 3 pounds greater per capita during the first 10 months of the fiscal year than in the same 1933 period," he said. "Receipts of cattle and calves were 48 and 51 per cent larger for the period."

Federal Orders Expand Work.

He said that plant operations were larger than normal because of federal purchases of drouth cattle and that employment was 20 per cent above 1933 and largest since 1920.

"There will be a smaller quantity of live stock available during 1935 and our rate of slaughtering operations will necessarily be reduced," he added. "This may bring new problems but our organization will be able to deal with them successfully."

Commenting on the addition to inventory reserves, Mr. Swift said:

"Profits on inventory, due to rising prices, disappear quickly when prices fall. Experience has shown that they can go just as unexpectedly as they come. During the period they stand on our books they provide no additional cash for the payment of dividends, for maintenance of property, or for plant extensions."

Operations More Profitable.

Income from operations for the 1934 fiscal year before depreciation and interest was $22,721,340, compared with $22,626,527 a year earlier. Depreciation charges were slightly less at $7,078,951, against $7,470,892.

After all deductions and adjustments, including the inventory reserve and dividends of $2,948,605, a total of $1,993,121 was added to surplus, which at the close of the year stood at $68,994,654, compared with $67,001,533 at the close of the preceding fiscal period. Inventories totaled $100,506,172, and cash, $17,357,254, against $72,981,625 and $26,196,819 a year earlier.

Commemorating its 50th year of incorporation, the company issued along with its statement an illustrated year book which deals at length with current business conditions, central markets, and live stock prices, company expenses, distribution of farm produce, and the American standard of living.

Treasury Sells 75 Million 182 Day Bills at 0.16 Pct.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The treasury's latest issue of $75,000,000 of 182 day discount bills drew total subscriptions of $333,129,000, Secretary Morgenthau announced tonight. Bids totaling $75,020,000 were accepted and the average price was 99.921, equivalent to an annual interest rate of about 0.16 per cent on a bank discount basis. The bills are dated Dec. 19 and will mature June 19, 1935. They were offered last Friday.

Bank Interest Cut Gives Hint of U. S. Policy

Reduction of the maximum interest on savings accounts to 2½ per cent by members of the federal reserve system and the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation was regarded in La Salle street yesterday as a significant step in formulating the administration's banking and monetary policies.

So far as immediate effects in loosing a flood of cheap money is concerned, however, it was felt that the results wil be nil because the New York and Chicago money centers already are "underselling" on money rates. Nor will depositors of Chicago banks be affected by the ruling, as interest rates already are down to 2 per cent here. Only in some smaller communities are banks still paying as much as 3 per cent.

Step to Cheap Money.

From the long range viewpoint, the action assumed particular significance. It was regarded as one more step in the direction of cheap money through lower interest rates. Particular note is taken of a continuation of an apparent drive for uniformity in interest throughout the country.

The first really concrete evidence of this determination on the part of the administration was given when the President insisted that the rate on loans under the federal housing act be fixed flatly at 5 per cent. A sliding scale between 5 and 6 per cent was turned down.

In some quarters it also was believed that the current action of the reserve and FDIC was merely a prelude to further downward reduction of interest rates. All agreed that the action proved the close tieup of all financial policies under a tight government rein. Centralization is no longer a matter of the slightest speculation or doubt.

La Salle Street Pleased.

La Salle street secretly expressed satisfaction over the apparent intention of the administration for bringing the small towns in line with the money centers. For some time New York and Chicago banks have been privately irked because correspondents in Nine Forks, Dakota, sometimes loaned money at as much as three or four points more than they obtained it for in financial centers where money was more available. They saw the uniformity push as an effort to end this condition, a push undertaken at an opportune time.

When all bank vaults are oozing with idle funds, it is reasoned, the chances of success in imposing uniformity are much greater than when money is in demand. Local bankers are not so sanguine as to hope that all differentials will be eliminated permanently, but they do feel that the day of big differences in interest rates is gone.

State Action Not Possible.

At State Auditor Edward J. Barrett's office it was said that state action to supplement the cut in interest on deposits is not possible under Illinois law. It was estimated, however, that all but 8 or 10 banks in the state will be affected as members of the FDIC or reserve system.

The Chicago Clearing House association will hold its December meeting this week, but no action is expected which would distrub the prevailing 2 per cent rate on savings deposits. The banking act of 1933 eliminated interest payments on commercial accounts.

FLORIDA BRANCH FOR MONTGOMERY WARD ANNOUNCED

The opening yesterday of a mail order branch at Jacksonville, Fla., and the establishment at once of some 15 order offices throughout Florida were announced yesterday by Montgomery Ward & Co. The mail order branch, located at 338-342 East Bay street in the southern city, will serve a large section of the southeast.

The company stated that for the present heavy merchandise and fast selling lines only will be carried in stock at Jacksonville. Orders for goods not included in stock will be relayed immediately to Baltimore and Chicago, and shipped the same day. The customer will pay transportation costs only from Jacksonville.

Among the points at which order offices will be opened are Sarasota, Palatka, Sanford, Fort Meyer, West Palm Beach, Fort Pierce, St. Augustine and Gainsville. These offices will carry no merchandise, but will take orders over the counter or by phone, make adjustments, etc.

U. S. TO MAKE FINAL CROP REPORT TODAY

The final reports and estimates on the 1934 crops will be made today by the government. This will be the last report made by the government on this year's crops, although some revision in figures may be made later. It is not expected that the preliminary figures previously issued will be materially changed.

Another report, the first on the 1935 crops, will be issued by the government tomorrow. The latter will give the amount of winter wheat planted and the condition of the crop. The same information will be furnished on the new rye crop.

CHICAGO BANKS BUY 22 MILLION SCHOOL BONDS

Pay RFC 101; City's Credit Improves.

Purchase of $22,300,000 of 4½ per cent board of education bonds from the Reconstruction Finance corporation was completed yesterday by a syndicate composed of the five major loop banks.

The bonds, taken at par by the RFC last Aug. 27 to finance paying the teachers and other school employés, were bought by the banks at 101. RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones, in making the announcement in Washington, referred to the price as the best rate Chicago financing has brought in a good many years."

Coincident with the bond transaction, it was learned definitly that the January pay roll of the board of education will be met promptly. Some apprehensions have been expressed in recent months because of expected complications at the close of the fiscal year.

New York Bank Buys Warants.

Another evidence of the improved standing of the once ill-regarded school board credit was the first sale of school tax anticipation warants to banks outside of Chicago since 1930. President James B. McCahey, president of the board, announced sale of $1,000,000 in warants to the Bank of the Manhattan company in New York City.

Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the board of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, was in charge of sale arrangements for the Chicago group, which also included the First National, Northern Trust, Harris Trust, and City National.

A better market for City of Chicago securities was credited by Mr. Cummings with making the bank purchase possible now, although the banks found themselves unable to buy the bonds last August, when the RFC undertook the school financing.

"The credit of the board of education was good last summer," explained Mr. Cummings, "but the public generally had not become aware of that fact. As a result, there was no market for the bonds. Now the public has awakened to the changed conditions and the bonds are marketable."

May Be Resold at Profit.

From this it was inferred that a portion of the bonds may be resold by the banks at a profit, despite the premium paid the RFC. As for the government, it was generally agreed that a good deal had been struck, one which would fully repay all expenses incidental to the financing.

Mr. Cummings referred to the purchase as a step in the administration's program, as announced recently by President Roosevelt, to turn RFC loans back to private banking as rapidly as the banks are able to assimilate the huge advances made by that governmental agency.

The bank executive was enthusiastic over the fact that the Chicago banks were able to take the action so soon. He also remarked upon the fact that the government was able to convert its investment into cash at such an early date and thus replenish the RFC loan funds by such a large amount.

In Washington, Jones took note of the sale as evidence of continued improvement in Chicago financing and credit.

TRUSTEES' FEES CUT SHARPLY BY REFEREE ADCOCK

Referee in Bankruptcy Edmund D. Adcock cut the requests for fees of the trustees, attorneys, and special witnesses in Trustees System Discount company bankruptcy hearings from $77,636 to $44,515 yesterday. The recommendations of the referee will be reviewed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson tomorrow.

Former Congressman William H. Wilson, trustee in bankruptcy for the firm, asked for $15,882, which was scaled down to $9,250. The referee's fees and commissions were listed at $7,353, and his expenses at $2,856. The claim of David K. Tone and from the attorneys for petitioning creditors, totaled $37,116, and was cut to $21,715. Of this Tone's part was $14,520. A claim of $10,246 for expert witness fees was filed, but only $6,460 was allowed. Sims, Stransky & Brewers' claim of $950 was disallowed.

ALL LIVE STOCK ADVANCES; HOGS JUMP 15 TO 40C

Prices of all live stock yesterday rebounded from last week's low close. The advance in hogs was the sharpest for a single day in four months. Gains ranged from 15 cents to 40 cents, with lightest kinds advancing most and lard type hogs the least. Prices averaged 35 cents higher.

Nearly all of the losses recorded during the last half of last week were recovered yesterday, and the average was $8.10, including $2.25 processing tax, which was 10 cents over the high spot of last week. The top at $8.55 was only 5 cents under the highest mark since Oct. 9.

An abrupt decrease in receipts was the outstanding bullish factor. Only 31,000 head arrived at Chicago.

Best grades of yearling steers advanced to the highest price levels of the season, while prime weighty corn fed stock brought the highest returns in two and a half months.

Fat yearling stock was in rather liberal supply, but demand centered in these kinds and prices paid for the 1,000 pound averages and lighter weights were closer to the top grades of heavy steers than at any time since last winter. Swift paid the $10.25 top.

Lambs advanced 25 to 35 cents over last week's close. Packers bought the better grades of slaughter stock at $7.35, while city butchers paid up to $7.50.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Renewed interest in United States government loans after a lull in the latter part of last week sent most of the federal issues up fractionally today. A slight improvement in the domestic corporate liens carried several into new 1934 high ground, while the foreign section, despite weakness in Italian securities, maintained a steady trend.

Early trading in the federal list showed little response to the federal reserve's order to reduce the interest rate on time and savings deposits to 2½ per cent from 3 per cent. It was pointed out that this has already been in effect in many of the members' banks. Most of the activity appeared in the treasury 3¼s of 1941 and the new 3¼s of 1952.

Best Corporate Liens Firm.

While most of the gilt edged corporate liens were firm, railroads generally were fractionally higher. Public utility issues eased slightly. Industrials showed minor price changes.

Company issues up fractions to a point or so included American Telephone debenture 5½s, American I. G. Chemical 5½s, Canadian Pacific debenture 4s, Central Pacific 5s, Burlington 4½s, Delaware and Hudson refunding 4s, General Cable 5½s, Milwaukee Electric 5s, Morris and Essex 4½s, Northern Pacific 4s, Pennsylvania debenture 4½s, Southern Railway 6½s, Western Maryland 5½s, and Western Union 5s of 1951. Steel issues did not reflect the estimated improvement in current production figures. Republic Steel 5½s and Otis Steel 6s lost a point or more.

Foreign List Irregular.

Bonds of some of the Scandinavian countries, especially those of Denmark, were heavily traded in. German issues were active and firm. Some of the Australian and Argentine obligations were around their highs for the year. Chilean issues were reactionary.

The break in Italian obligations was said to have been due in part to nervousness over Rome's discussions with the league of nations on the African controversy. Among the losers in the Italian division were the government 7s, off 2¼.

There was some expansion of the trading volume, transfers totaling $12,781,000, par value, against $11,841,000 last Friday.

United Drug, Inc.

Investors' Guide: Can you give me information on United Drug?

H. O. W.

Answer: United Drug, Inc., is the largest of the former Drug, Inc. [since dissolved] subsidiaries which has regained independent status, but its earnings were the least satisfactory of the subsidiaries of the former Drug, Inc. The company was caught with expensive leases and high priced inventories when the general price level began falling.

United Drug, Inc., permitted retail subsidiaries, such as the Liggett company, Owl Drug company, etc., to go into receivership. In 1933 it sold all but 75,000 of its 1,125,000 shares of Boots Pure Drug Company, Ltd., stock [Boots was the English subsidiary operating about 900 stores]. With the proceeds from the sale of stock it repurchased most of the United States bankrupt subsidiaries free and clear of debt.

The chain now has about 600 retail drug stores. In addition to being one of the largest drug retailers, United is one of the principal American drug manufacturers. It manufactures between 6,000 and 9,000 drug store items. About 85 per cent of the goods manufactured are sold by independent "Rexall" dealers, numbering about 10,000, the remainder being sold by outlets of subsidiaries.

Net income for the first nine months of 1934, including profit from sale of securities, was $1,094,000, or 78 cents a share.

The four year record of earnings follows.

	Net sales.	Net Inc. per income. share.
*1933	$24,616,000	$ 648,000 $ .46
1932	26,536,000	224,000 .16
1931	34,118,000	2,546,000 1.82
1930	36,354,000	3,203,000 2.29

*Including Owl Drug for only 3 months.

At the close of 1933 cash assets of more than $14,000,000 compared with total current liabilities of only $3,662,000. Funded debt, due 1953, totaled $37,364,000. There are outstanding 1,400,560 shares of $5 par capital stock on which no dividends have yet been declared.

The stock is speculative.

Duke-Price Power.

Investors' Guide: Until some six or more weeks Duke-Price Power company 6s, due 1966, were listed on the New York exchange, but I see no more quotations on them. I am thinking it hardly probable that there have been no further sales. Is there an other reason?—J. S. M.

Answer: The New York Stock exchange suspended trading in the bonds on Oct. 11, 1934. The bonds, however, are traded in over the counter.
